What have you learned during the pandemic?

I have learned a lot during this pandemic. One thing that I have learned is that your bond with your family is the most essential part during this pandemic. It gives you strength in all of the things that you encounter in your day to day living. Also, I have learned that this pandemic taught us that communication is very important in each one of us. This pandemic cut us off in personally communicating with others. Last thing is that, this pandemic taught me to save because during this time companies are reducing their capacities due to the new normal and the flow of money in one of each pockets could be considered as scarce, that is why we must save in order to survive another day.

If you had to choose one, would you consider yourself a big-picture person or a detail-oriented person?

If I had to choose one between being a big-picture person and a detail-oriented person, I would choose to be a detail-oriented person. Being a detailed-oriented person makes you the most keen even to small details. Being keen to small details is important because one thing left out in a thought would create a big impact in all that it applies to. Being a detailed-oriented person has a great organizational skill which is important if you are an employee of a company which is related to input a lot of important data. Being a detailed-oriented person also has an important job to categorize and organize important data that is given in a short period of time.
