If you could be a teacher for a day, what would you teach and why?

If given a chance to become a teacher for a day, I would prefer teaching my students about good manners and right conduct since I believe that almost all successful people starts their success by inhibiting positive behaviours. Once they learn the right attitude, everything will just follow and it would be easy for them to deal with almost anything. Since not all students are being taught with good manners in their home, it would be my job as their educator to fill the gap in their learnings.

Is it better to plan or be spontaneous? Explain your answer.

For me, it is always better to plan. With the correct and accurate planning, the flow of the processes will just go smoothly. Also, it would be effective to plan out things first so that you would eventually have the idea and picture of the outcome and also to minimize and even avoid any sort of errors that may come ahead. With this, you will have a clear view of the resolution that you would be expecting.
