What is something you'd be happy doing every single day for the rest of your life?

Seafaring has been my dream and passion since I was a child. Now, that I had experienced the life on-board, I realized that it is not the job I want to do everyday. Shifting on this industry is a big leap. Through pandemic, I realized that working with customers, giving them the satisfaction they were looking for is the job for me.

I have been a volunteer for Sowing Legacy Movement, Inc. since college and seeing the happy faces of the children and their parents after we conduct our outreach program gives me satisfaction as a human being. It makes me believe that kindness and humanity still live on. Now, these children are my customers, giving them the satisfaction is what I did. I would apply this to any job I am in through perseverance and dedication. Making people happy and satisfied is what I want to do for the rest of my life.

Tell us about your favorite book.

I have read this Miss Peregrine's: Home for Peculiar Children when I was in college. The story was full of lessons. It made me realize that, just like on the book where everyone is peculiar or unique in their own ways, everyone in this world also is. We may not have the brute force, or can make fire, and neither could fly, but we, as people, have different skill sets and talents that we should embrace. However, just like on the book, having these talents doesn't only stop there. We should practice and enhance it to give our full potential. As I always say, we should never stop learning.

Moreover, the protagonists on that book faced many challenges and obstacles. Hence, given the story plot's circumstances and tribulations, we are also facing endeavors in life. We could conquer what ever life gives us through perseverance and patience. We should thrive to conquer these problems. Believe that there is a happy ending ahead of us. If it isn't happy, then it's not yet the end.

Lastly, it taught me to be loyal. Loyalty to your friends, to your relationship.
