Do you consider yourself lucky?

I wouldn't consider myself lucky because I believe that the things that I have and what I am right now is a product of my decisions and actions in life. What I decide yesterday will affect my present and future. As for the things that I have right now, I consider all of them as blessing instead of luck. These things are given for a purpose. Maybe because we need to share them to others, to improve and to develop. If I consider myself as lucky, I would have the tendency to slack and do nothing because all I have is luck. I could choose between doing nothing and doing something. Everyday is a blessing, and the fact that I am here right now, alive and well in the midst of pandemic, is a great blessing not luck.

Between your dad and mom, who are you closest to and what is the biggest lesson you've learned from him or her?

If I would choose between my mom and dad, I'd choose my mom. She's the most brilliant, strong, courageous, hardworking and loving person I know. She's a role model for me. She pursued her dreams amidst difficulties financially. She went outside the country to work and to save money. She came back and pursued her studies. Education is very important to her. She believes that everything can be taken away from her but now education.
