If you had to be shipwrecked on a deserted island, but all your human needs — such as food and water — were taken care of, what two items would you want to have with you?

If I had to be shipwrecked on a deserted island, the two items that I would want to have with me is my medallion that has an engraved Mother of Perpetual Help on it and a bowl. I chose the medallion, first and foremost because I firmly believe in the power of prayers. So in a place where I am not fully familiar with, with no one to talk to, it's important that I keep my faith in God and pray to give me strength and courage to get through and to keep me sane so I'd be able to do what I need to do in order to survive. I also chose bowl so I'd have something to put on once I get for food or drink on the island. While it is important to have a strong faith, I also need to make sure that my physical body is taken care of.

Describe the color green to somebody who is blind.

For me, green is the color of nature. The first thing that comes into my mind when I hear of the color green is plants and trees. So if I had to describe the color green to somebody who is blind, I'd tell the person that it's like the leaves on a plant or a tree. I'd let that person touch it and feel every part of it and how it was formed. Color green could also be associated to the air that we breathe that's coming from those plants or trees. So every time that person takes a breathe in and out, he would remember the color green and appreciate how wonderful life is.
