1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why? *

If anything will be possible, I think my job will be an astronaut. Well, ever since I was a child I've been always dreaming of being one. I want to travel the outer space, different planets, and even the moon. If it was really possible. But aside from being an astronaut, my next dream job would be a MotoGP rider. Well, for one reason, I really love racing. I've been racing since I was in high school. I joined track and fields, Crosscountry MTB racing, BMX track racing, and even MTB enduro racing. I've always been a fan of racing and traveling. And if anything really is possible, Those were my best dream job. But if I'll be realistic, the best possible job that I may have would be an Electrical Installation and Maintenance agent. Because of a simple reason. I have an NCII of Electrical Installation and Maintenance certificate from Tesda RTC Talisay.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh grad), what was it and how did you overcome it? *

Yes, I've been there a lot, just kidding. Well, to be honest, it is a yes really, especially way back with my previous employer. Let's simply put it this way. I was hired by that company, and I was already scheduled for training. But before I even passed the training, my father got hospitalized due to the fluids building up in his lungs. He was admitted to the hospital for his lungs to be checked and for the fluids to be removed. WE stayed there for almost a month. At night, I'll be at the office for my training, and during the daytime, I'll be at my father's side to assist him. One reason I do so is that none of my cousins nor even my sister would like to stay with my father at the hospital. So I did everything for my father even though I barely have slept for the whole 3 weeks that my father was at the hospital. The question is, how did I overcome that stressful situation? The answer is simple, I need to overcome those simply because I want my father to be better again while still having my job.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? *

In my previous position, the most challenging task I had was I think to educate our consumers that if they want to have a battery for their solar system equipment, they need to have it requested before the system was installed in their houses, It was quite hard for me especially if the consumer will tell you that they were not informed about it. Basically, it was the sales representative's mistake not to inform the potential buyer about the option to have a battery for their solar, and if based on the contract, Once the system is already installed without a battery, we can no longer install one. One main reason is that the planned system for that property is without a battery. They have different devices, different inverters, and stuff. There are many things to keep in mind before you ever sign a contract. Especially if it will last for a lifetime.

4. In your previous position, what task did you enjoy most and why? *

For me, the most enjoyable task that I have was maybe the billing part. I am quite a fan of people calling in to process their payment because, in that very part, I can already build rapport and engage in a funny yet professional conversation with our customers. When I am having a good conversation with my customers, that simply made my day. I always feel overjoyed especially if my customer says that I've been helpful, cheerful, and so funny. I always do so because I know there are a lot of our customers who don't have a good day. Some of them may not feel well, some of them may be lonely. So on my end, I'll ask myself. How may I make this person's day feel better? That's when I'll decide to build rapport every day with each and every one of my customers. Even if they respond or not, it's ok, because, for me, I don't mind being ignored, at least I tried.

5. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you? *

In my previous company, I can not really tell how they describe me. One possible reason is that I do not have much care about how they looked at me. I will just enjoy my job, enjoy the atmosphere, and enjoy everything that is happening in my surroundings. I have been always a happy person, I am always being kind to others. I always look up to those people showing humanity, kindness to others, and caring for their surroundings. I've been always trying my best to be the most humble person to every person I met. So if I will be asked how my previous managers or coworkers describe me, my answer probably will be simple. "How would I know" if it's not me to judge me then I don't know. Because I know for myself that I've been showing the best me every time. Maybe not the best in academics or excellence, but if we will be talking about attitude, I will have a huge edge over others. charut hehe

6. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of? *

The personal accomplishment that I am very proud of will be the time when I first win an MTB Cross-country race at our barangay. I won first place even though I had a lot of struggles from the beginning of the race. My gears are not well synchronized, my tires got flat out due to the thumbtacks thrown on the road by our enemy team. And because of that, I have to stop and change the internal tube of my tires. A lot of competitors pass me by, but I still kept going on until I finally pass everyone without me knowing that I already did. And when I got to the finish line I thought I was the last in our category. That's when I realized that there is no other racer or contestant have reached the finish line yet because I am the only rider that is already there, and then when people looked at the finished line that's when they started celebrating. So that was my best moment and I am proud of it.
