

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job was to be a lawyer or an agriculturist. In Fact, Accountancy was only my 3rd option. My 1st was Law, and the 2nd was Agriculture but due to lack of financial assistance, I chose to take up BS in Accountancy in a State College that is offering that course in a cheap price and also a very efficient school here in Bacolod. But of course, just like what I said, it was not my primary choice so I shifted during the 2nd semester of my freshman year but still it is related to accounting yet is lighter than Accountancy. I wanted to be a lawyer because I wanted to be a public servant that helps especially poor people that are physically, mentally and emotionally abused but doesn't have the means to go and seek for a lawyer who can help them with their case in order to have Justice. And also, I wanted to follow in the footsteps of my late uncle who happened to be a Fiscal and who also helped me financially and supports me every single time that I'm in great need not only financially. I also wanted to be an Agriculturist because I really love animals and nature. In Fact, I have 12dogs, 5 cats, and more or less 50 chickens in our house and also because my mother has a green palm who loves to plant fruits and vegetables even when she was still young.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I've been in that kind of situation. There's always a saying "YOU CAN'T PLEASE EVERYONE". No matter how good you are and no matter how hard you try to be the best version of yourself there will always be one person that will still pull you down. In my case, when I was still working as an English Professor, I had no problem because my co-teachers are very kind and very approachable but when the time comes that the company promoted me as the new Executive Secretary and at the same time the accountant that is where it all started. There was a certain person inside the office that always pointed me out and always complaining about all the things that I am doing and it reached to the 3rd point that she is even making up stories and relaying it to the owner just to get rid of me. At first, I just ignored it but when I found out why she is treating me that way, I decided to stop and leave because aside from being mentally and physically stressed and exhausted, I don't want to be part of her and get involved in her dirty work. That's why even though I love my co-teachers and students, I really have to reach my verdict and depart from that certain company.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position, the task that I found most challenging for me was getting the money to the bank (by foot and alone) and bringing it to the company. Not because of being robbed or what but I just don't want to be tagged or be suspected if anything happens to the money because in the end, no matter what's the reason why the money is incomplete, they will blame it all to me. It's not hard if they will provide me with a service/company car to accompany me and to secure the said money. The most interesting thing for me is giving the payrolls for the workers and also handling and encoding invoices because it relates to my major which is accounting and for me the smiles of each worker every time that give their salaries are PRICELESS and of course, it is the most awaited part of the job!

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

First of all, I don't want to lift my own chair but I think my previous manager will describe me as a committed employee who works hard with the given tasks and also an employee that abides by the rules and regulations of the company. With regards to my coworkers, I think they will describe me as a very energetic person, jolly and also friendly. I like socializing with others and I always start a conversation with them even in the first meeting. They would probably describe me as generous because I like giving things, food or anything whenever I can and if I have extra money. I think they will also describe me as a sweet person because there was a time that I think it was valentine's day, I gave all of them chocolate pop designed as a rose, heart and everything represents valentine's day and I really like making people smile even in the simplest way that I can do.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

My personal achievement that I can be most proud of is when I finished my degree and graduated as a special awardee from Carlos Hilado Memorial State College (CHMSC). I am not only proud that I finished the course but I am also proud to show my parents that this is the outcome of all the sacrifices they've made to me. That is my way of giving back to them the honor and love they have given me. Even until now, as I write this my eyes got teary because every single time that I remember my mother's face and my father's reaction the moment I stepped on stage with my Toga is a treasure for me that I will be bringing as long as I live. It was so special to me because despite all the heartaches and failures I gave to them in the past, they never left my side and kept on believing in me. Just like the old saying, "Children can ignore their parents, but parents will never turn their backs on their children" and I was really grateful to have them as my loving parents. Seeing my mother and father happy, healthy and strong is more than enough for me to carry on with my life and fight with any obstacles and triumphs that I may encounter in the future.
