

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If I was given a higher IQ and good memory, I would want to be a Chemical Scientist. I want to dig deeper into everything in this world that exists, even the things that humans haven't discovered yet. I want to understand everything and its function and how they are made. I want to see where and how they are formed. I want to know the purpose of every element and its possible consequences. There are things that are happening now that can't be explained by are five senses as civil and I want to go beyond that. I want to explore all the existing things in this world. I want to learn the significance of everything that our bare eyes are limited to seeing. I want to touch mentally all the creation in this world by having knowledge about it. We are constantly living but we also know that we are not living alone.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

In my previous job at a hospital, I was assigned to the medical fee of doctors knowing the nature of their job some of the Doctors have an unpleasant attitude. Sometimes I get scolded by them for reasons that are beyond my control. There was also a time when the cheques that I needed for the signatory got misplaced by one of the owners and they put the blame on me and kept telling me that it was my fault, when in fact they are the ones who are holding the cheques. I continue to suppress and manage all their anger and blame because I love my job. I admit I couldn't sleep for the first night but as I was thinking about it, I realized that it's not really my fault then why do I beat myself also? I should not push myself hard for the things that are not in my control.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

It's hard to please all the people around you but it's also an accomplishment when you can take them. In my previous job, one of my tasks is to provide good customer service, it is a bit challenging and draining at the same time but I was well satisfied when the time finally came and they know how to show respect even to the people whose gaining lower income than them. It really fills my heart every time a great doctor who studies all her life, gives respect equally. Respect isn't something that you will receive all the time even if you are giving them threefold when they don't know what respect is, it's nothing. That's why I work hard to gain their respect. It took a while but as I continued to provide them with good and satisfactory service, eventually they already learned how to show equality. Nothing is easy when you are working or in your job, it is just a matter of dedication and consistency.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

They always told me that I was really good for the position. They also told me that I am soft but I am fit with that draining position. They say that I handled the situation even on times that I was crying secretly because I was hurt by the words of doctors, then they always encouraged me to do some things that I am afraid to do because I lack confidence. I give my 100% effort to my job and finish it but I can't give my 100% confidence into it. My workmates also told me that I'm easy to be taken for granted because if someone is asking for my help, I would give it to them right away. I am well aware of it but I always think that at least I helped them as long as I can still be able to help in any way that I can. Kindness is free.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

These things are not tangible but I'm still proud of them. I'm proud that I have a soft heart to empathize with other people. I am proud that I value my family and loved ones very much to point that I am hurting thinking every time that they might be facing situations that is heavy. I am proud also that I still remain strong despite the challenges I have faced since I was a child that may define what I am today. I am proud of myself for trying things even without assurance. I am proud of myself for aiming for goals and dreams despite the downsides. I am proud that I slowly got to face the things that I was afraid of. I am proud of who and what I am right now because every time I look back, I am far from where I started. More journeys to come.
