

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

I had a lot of big dreams when I was young but now the only dream job I have is to be a full-time travel vlogger that shares the cheapest possible way to travel. I have mentioned quite a lot that I love to travel and experience new cultures, getting to know a lot of people really excites me and I want to share it with my family and friends who can't travel at the moment. I want to share my experiences, the joy I am feeling, and the things that I am learning from going places. Also, since I travel a lot, this idea actually came from my friends. They have encouraged me to try vlogging because they think it suits me well. I tried it once and I enjoyed it. I might try it on my next trip and see if it fits me well or if I still need to learn more.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

I used to work in a company that makes uniforms for schools and one of the most stressful moments in my entire career there is when it is enrollment time and when the parents demand their kid's uniforms to be custom made when they saw us do it to other students. The thing is we have standard sizing for all the uniforms and the only time we do custom-made is when the student is a lot bigger than the others. There are kids that stand six feet tall at the age of 12 and there is no size available for them. That's the consideration for a custom-made and other parents demand to do the same even when their kids still fit in the size set available. We politely presented to them the rules with regards to the costume made and though they are still furious about it we still need to stick to it with respect to those who requested before them that just followed the said ruling.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The most challenging part of my task before was when there was a delay with our shipments like fabrics and other items that we are sourcing from China which leads delays in our production. We usually follow our production lead time well to deliver the goods to our clients on our promised date but due to some delays, this causes us to request extensions that in some cases might lead us to lose our clients in the future. The good thing is it never happened to us. The thing that I enjoyed the most is when we are able to close big clients and when we see our work everywhere. It gives us pride that we made that design and uniforms for them. I also ask for feedback from our clients if how the fabric is, if it is itchy and if it is comfortable to use. I get to interact with people and hear first-hand some of the things that we can improve with our next projects with them.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

In my last job, I believe my manager would describe me as a loyal employee who stayed with them for the longest time as their admin assistant. When I resigned from the company, he told me that I'm one of his trusted employees and that even when he was abroad for business, he can freely give me postdated checks without fear of me doing unnecessary actions with them, and with a good record I hold in the company he even assured me that I can go back with them if I'd like to and will gladly take me in. My coworkers might say that I am a strict admin assistant and I can only agree. They even joked saying that it was as if the company was mine. I was just trying to implement the company rules and regulations correctly. I know the in and out of our income so I just want us to be good stewards of our resources and manage our expenses accordingly.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I have so many personal goals I wanted to achieve but one of which was when I took the leap of faith to finally start paying for my own place. Though it is still on loan but the fact that I can see where my income goes really feels good and the other thing is I am so proud to have visited two of the most beautiful places and difficult destination to go in the Philippines, Batanes and Balabac. In my professional career I thought I would really be spending the rest of my professional life with my previous company but things didn't end up the way I thought it would and as I apply here at Pathcutters which is a new environment and set up for me, I am still looking forward and expectant for a good opportunity for me here. In the next couple of months or years I wish to do something I can be proud of in my professional career.
