

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job would be where I can showcase my skills and learn more, and also where I can grow as a person. I have had different jobs since I graduated, and I have acquired a lot of skills not related to my college course. I have also experienced workplaces where I become stagnant and the environment is toxic. My dream is to be able to work somewhere I can be productive and in which I can hone my skills more, and learn a lot of things from. I would want to have a sense of accomplishment at the end of the day, be a person that can reach new heights in my career, learn and have fun at work, and to work in a company where they value their employees and help them with their growth as person, and as a part of an industry.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I experienced a stressful situation back when I was a CSR for SRB Digitals. One of my workmates had a fight with our manager, and it went on for a few days, then it turned into a week. They were really close friends before, so it made it more awkward for us onlookers. The atmosphere in our small office began to become sour and it affected other people's work since neither of them would communicate with each other. She decided to suddenly quit her job, without notifying anybody. There are only a few employees, so we had to extend our shift a bit, to cover the sudden schedule shift. What I did was take in some of the tasks she was assigned, until her replacement came in, and encouraged my other workmates so that the atmosphere and our work spirit would not be affected too much. After a week, her replacement came in and we got our regular schedules back.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position as an online private tutor for a grade 2 child, the most challenging for me would be her short attention span. She was a bright kid and was really interested in learning, but as we all know, kids are very active, they get bored easily, they get distracted easily, and most of the time, they just want to play. I find it really challenging because of the interruptions to our lessons, so I have to be creative to get her attention more, make sure my presentations and delivery are fun and bright, interact with her more and gently direct her back to our topic. The task I enjoyed the most, as a tutor, was creating tests/quizzes and the storytelling part because we are both able to interact with each other, talk comfortably as she becomes animated with the answers to the tests and the stories, and it also lets me check if she understands our lessons.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

I believe my previous managers/coworkers will describe me as a team player and a reliable employee. As a team player, I am always willing to help my coworkers or my customers. I try to learn what is required so that I can be an asset not only to my team, but also an asset to my company. They know that I care more about helping the team to succeed than only my own success. I am considerate and I know how to adapt to different personalities, and also cooperate with events. They would also describe me as a reliable employee, because aside from being reliable with attendance, they know they can count on me to do my job properly, finish the necessary reports due, provide accurate information, go beyond what is expected of me, and even be reliable not only as a co-worker or employee, but also as a friend.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

My personal accomplishment that I am most proud of is when I passed my Nursing board exam. When I look back and see how I got there, even when Nursing is not my number one career choice, even when I just took it to follow my parents' wishes, even when I have no interest in it at all, I was still able to graduate without dropping on any subject, and I have successfully passed the Nursing board exam. It made me realize that no matter what your circumstance is, you can still achieve your goals if you are willing to work on it, learn what comes your way, and stay positive in life. The professional accomplishment I am most proud of is when I opened my Storybook Events business. It was the first time for me to have my own business, but we really enjoyed all the challenges, both physically and mentally. And it makes me satisfied to see how our decorations end up, and how it makes our clients happy.
