

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

I have liked games since I was a child, and always wondered how they make the game. How the game functions, how the character interacts with the game world, and how these people make it very entertaining and fun, were the thoughts that popped into my head when I was playing my games. Games are a whole new world for me. I liked exploring Fictional Kingdoms and saving people in trouble, battling glorious foes from different places, and discovering lore and stories from these various places. When I was little, I always had a lot of fun playing Mario with my brother, how we raced to reach the final castle, defeating the boss and saving the princess. Although I always lost to my brother in those races, I made a lot of good memories with my family. That's why if anything was possible, I'd like my dream job to be a game programmer.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

There was one time in my previous workplace when we were overworked and had to monitor 3 stations per person for radio news since there were new Radio Stations and there were a lot of events happening at the time. I proposed to my supervisor that while listening to these stations, we could record the stations and monitor their Facebook as they also go Live there so that we can listen back if ever we miss something or were not finished doing our work on a different station yet. It helped and provided us with some free time for ourselves to rest and organize, and come back to focus on our work. Thankfully, the workload decreased and went back to normal a month later, but we still recorded and monitored our respective Radio Station's Facebook page, so that if we weren't able to finish transcribing, we can come back replay the audio again.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous work, the task I found most challenging was monitoring emergency news, and transcribing it as soon as possible so that the Public Information Office was updated and able to respond to Interviews on whatever the emergency may be. We would sometimes work overtime so that we could finish it on the day, and email it to our supervisor, as it was urgent and needed on the spot. The task I enjoyed the most was listening to the National and International section of the news, as it kept me updated on the outside world when the Pandemic was happening at the time. There would be celebrity scandals, the development on Senator Manny Pacquiao and whether he'll come back to Boxing or serve the people as a Politician and various other stuff. I also enjoy listening to Radio Dramas as sometimes the stories would be surprising and have some plot twist, or they would be very relatable to me.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My Previous Manager or Coworkers would describe me as quiet, as I'd focus on my work back then and didn't speak much while doing work. They would have also described me as dependable, as sometimes when there were technical issues or problems, they would go to me for help. I'd help them on checking what went wrong on their computer and do basic troubleshooting, or I'd google it if I didn't know what the cause of the problem was. I also sometimes got assigned to finish over what my coworker wasn't able to do on time, as I am fast at typing on the computer. My manager would describe me as punctual and alert as I always submit and email my work on time, or when I was able to make it to the deadline, I'd notify them of my progress. I would also notify them quickly when there were emergency news or flash reports on the Stations I was monitoring.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishments I'm most proud of are the times when I graduated from my BSIS course and got my diploma, and as a fresh graduate I was also able to find a job quickly. I was finally able to buy my own shoes and necessities, I was able to provide financial help to my mother and take off some burden on the financial side of our household, being able to save up and buy myself a new Cellphone, and buy myself a bicycle as well so that I would be able to exercise and explore on my free time. For professional accomplishments, I am proud that I was able to help relieve my coworkers when they had technical problems as they knew the basic operations of computers but were unknowledgeable of the complex stuff when there are errors or problems. I was also proud that I was able to be punctual and was never late for work.
