

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job would probably still be a marketer because I want to test the skills and knowledge I have acquired and see if I can make things work effectively or know if I am capable of doing the work. I would also love to create ads that would eventually make an impact and become viral as I was inspired by the popular ads I have watched from Jollibee and RC. Furthermore, I want to learn more from this type of work because as of now I know that I still lack the experience but I also aspire to grow in this type of industry. I also want to do this job in collaboration with my friends because I see that if we work together our creative minds think alike and work well together. With the thoughts and ideas we exchanged, something fun and exciting comes up.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I experienced a stressful situation way back when I was still in my college days. It was the time when I became an irregular student because I was a late enrollee and it was the year when we started making groups and preparing for our incoming thesis. As an irregular student, it was very challenging for me since I was assigned to a different class and needs to be a part of a group with people I don't really personally know. Working with them, especially on our thesis, was very hard since communication is limited considering that it was done in an online class. Some of my groupmates became also a handful because they do not cooperate well and does only the task when the deadline is near. As the leader of the group, I was forced to do some of their work instead just to finish everything and to be able to comply with the deadline set by our professor. As the work progressed, I was able to overcome it by strictly dividing the task and monitoring their work progress. I even warned them that I would give them a low point during the evaluation. In the end, I am happy and proud that we were able to finish our thesis, and all the hard work and breakdowns paid off.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The task I both find challenging and also the one I enjoy the most is the internship we had in JA Philippines. I find the task challenging because we were asked to come up with and implement a business (Creatique Co.) that is unique and profitable at the same time. We had a hard time thinking of what product to make since there are already a lot of good products offered on the market. On the other hand, I really also enjoyed doing the tasks in our internship because my groupmates and I created a bond. We all enjoyed each other's company, starting from making our marketing plan up to the actual making of our products until the selling part, everyone helped and cooperated. The time spent and the memories shared were really treasured. I like how everyone's ideas matter and how everyone's opinions are heard. It was really a good experience for all of us to learn because we were able to stand by each other's side in facing the challenges of our mini business and laugh together at its success.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

Back when I was still a student, my friends/classmates would always describe me as someone who is quiet. Because of this, they would often see and imply that I am a serious person because I only speak when they ask me questions or if I need to ask something from them. However, my close friends who are already used to my silence would describe me as a hardworking, reliable, and fun person. They say that I am hardworking because they often see how dedicated I am to doing my task just to achieve my goals. Also, they say that I am reliable not just with the task or responsibility given to me, but they also see me reliable in keeping their secrets whenever they share something personal with me. Lastly, my close friends would describe me as a fun person because when I am surrounded by people, I am comfortable with I would tend to show my goofy and loud side.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I think the personal accomplishment I am proud of the most is being able to help send myself to school and graduate with flying colors. Since I came from a poor family, my parents did not really have the means to let me study in a private school. Luckily, because of my hard work, determination, and wisdom given to me by God, I was able to finish my studies, I was able to avail myself of a scholarship in our city which pays for my tuition in full and gives monthly allowances. Through this, one of my goals, which is to acquire a degree, was made possible and this also helped my parents lessen the burden in terms of financial matters. In the long run, I realized that I should also do something and see to it that I am also worthy of the opportunity given to me. It made me think that I should work harder and exert more effort. Thankfully, I was also able to reach it and made my parents proud.
