

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

My dream job would be a Police Officer. It's been my dream ever since high school. I was so sure that it would be my profession at that time. I'm just fascinated by how cool they look in their uniform. Also seeing a woman in a Police uniform is just amazing. But unfortunately, I was not able to fulfill it due to some circumstances that happened before. I understand my parents though if they were not supportive of me becoming a Police Officer. We lost my one and only brother at that time, so they became terrified of the thought that they might lose me as well. Then when I turned 16, I remembered, I suddenly wanted to become a Nun. I became attached to our parish church. I know it's the total opposite of being a Police Officer, so my parents again were shocked. And that became only my dream vocation.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

It was when I had to transfer from one branch to another. It was not easy for me at first. I had to start all over again. There are a lot of adjustments on my part that includes my duties and my working environment. But on the positive side, I'm grateful for every opportunity given to me may it be small or big. I considered it a learning curve. It's always fulfilling to be part of a company that helps you grow professionally it really motivates you to work harder. You become more aware of how they are trying to help you grow. Also, there was this instance when they assigned me to handle a certain transaction, with urgency, I was taken aback. But what I did was, I accepted the offer and just dealt with it. Right after I completed the task, I felt like I became a valuable employee.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

As a bookkeeper, it was very challenging to meet the deadlines every month. I had to gather all the data from each branch. I always need to make sure also that my data and reports are complete and reliable. There are a lot of things also that I need to consider, one of them is time management. I always try to manage my time especially when it's nearing the month's end. But if there is one thing that I get to enjoy while working, it is that I get to work with people who have the same passion and eagerness to do the job properly. I'm always inspired to go to work and even if I may encounter several concerns, I know that I can always rely on their wisdom and knowledge. It's important to work in an environment that helps you grow, not just as a person but also professionally.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

To be honest, I haven't asked them before how I was as a coworker to them. But some of my colleagues told me how focused I am when I'm working on my assigned task. They told me how friendly and approachable I was. I'm very dedicated when it comes to my duties and responsibilities, and I believe my previous manager saw it in me when he assigned me one of the major tasks in our department. They also allow me to do the final checking when it comes to our monthly reports. It is simply how they believe and relies on my capability as a tax bookkeeper. I also worked as a teacher in Bangkok for 2 years, and my employer approached me once and told me how patient I was when dealing with kids. It is sometimes tiring to deal with cranky kids but overall, I enjoy it. I was able to manage my emotions and control my temper. It has been really a great experience for me.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

One of the things that I considered as my personal accomplishment was when I decided to work as teacher abroad. It was not an easy decision for me since I'm a family-oriented person. But working independently abroad helps me discover more about myself. I get to experience things I was not able to do before. I was completely out of my comfort zone and that's when I realized that it's not bad to try things out. I may sometimes fail, but that's fine, at least I tried. Accomplishment professionally, I was able to work in a big company that handles 14 branches, and I was able to do my assigned task properly. I was assigned to a department that deals with various transactions that are very confidential and important to the company. They trusted me enough to put me in a position that would help them keep some of the company's confidential records.
