

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job is to become an artist. Not limited to being a singer but an artist as a general. Ever since I was a little girl, I have been fond of singing and dancing. Until I reached high school, where I realized that I also like acting. Then, I joined a theater group when I was in high school. It is my dream job because I like to be creative and I like to show the world what I can do. I know I don't look and act like a typical person who likes art, but I'm expressing my passion in a different way. I also want to become like the people I see on TV, popular and rich. It's never wrong to dream, right? They get to travel the world. I also want to travel while doing something I love. Showing my talent to people. I can do that now, what's stopping me is myself. I don't have enough confidence in myself. I also don't want to be the center of attention. Twisted right? I want to become an artist but I'm afraid of the world.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

It was when one of our clients pulled out a project that I was involved in. My team and I were divided by our TL. I was assigned to a different project. It was hard to adjust since I don't know the flow of their work and most of them, I don't recognize. The most stressful part is that it's a night-shift-only project. What I did to overcome it is to just think about the salary I'm going to receive. Since the company gave night differential, I was motivated to work even though it was super stressful. I also made new friends, days after I moved. They were not as bad as I thought they were. They were very welcoming and helpful during my adjustment. I still visit my other team members just to catch up and ask if they were all right adjusting to the new environment. My Team Leader also helped me overcome the stress.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous job, what I found most challenging was when I was assigned to train our newbies. I became their query person. I find it challenging because I was not prepared to be a trainer. It was 2 years after my regularization. I was not quite skilled back then, and thinking that I have people asking me about their tasks was so challenging and nerve-wracking. But at the same time, being a trainer was also what I enjoyed the most. Because I get to tease them, prank them, and give them advice about their tasks. I like it when people need me. As time went by, I kind of liked the responsibility given to me. And it was so rewarding when I heard that they passed the training. I am not the one who gave them their assessment, it was done by my Team Leader. They treated me to drinks after that.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

Well, they might describe me as a quiet person. I rarely talked in my previous job. I only talk when asked and when I have a question. They may also describe me as a know-it-all because even though I rarely talk, I know a lot. There's this one co-worker that I have, he used to call me "Doc" because I know a lot of things about the medical field. One of my co-workers would describe me as a sleepy person because whenever she sees me, I'm always dozing off or sleeping during breaks. Not to brag, but they also may describe me as a talented and creative person. Sometimes they would ask me to join a contest. There was a time when I heard a lot of compliments, it was during Halloween. My previous company held a Halloween Costume Contest. We were encouraged to use recycled materials for the costume. They complimented my costume because I was the one who made it. It took me an all-nighter to finish and it was all worth it.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

This might sound petty but the accomplishment I was most proud of is when the first Sunflower I planted grew buds. It was now just an ordinary sunflower; it was a Red Velvet Sunflower. Red Velvet Sunflowers are red petals while ordinary Sunflowers are yellow petals. My plant received a lot of attention from my neighbors because they have never seen such sunflowers. I was not a great planter, to begin with. I lost hope when a lot of seedlings didn't germinate in the first five days. I did everything. I followed tutorials on YouTube, but they still didn't work. I told myself, in the next Sunflower season I will do it properly. I waited a year to plant again sunflowers. I grew patient in raising them. I didn't rush like last time. Then after a month, I started seeing buds. I was so happy back then. Actually, I'm planting sunflowers now. I'm looking forward to seeing them flowering next month.
