

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything is possible, for a dream job. Since I love either watching or reading anything related to anime and that is one of my favorite things to do in my free time, of course, it would be getting paid by just watching anime. Maybe making reviews, giving feedbacks, suggestions, and so on. I also wouldn't worry about not having any more animes to review since there would also be a numerous number of manga, manhwa, and manhua to read, enough for me to not be able to finish all the current existing books in my entire lifetime.

Another one would be becoming an independent youtuber with a lot of subscribers without the help of youtuber agencies, freely uploading content around my own hobbies, not worrying whether I would lack content to upload or not. And yeah, I could do it anywhere I want whether I'm home, or having a vacation and just let my editors do their job.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, it's pretty common to have some. There are a number of stressful situations I was in, in my previous work. One of them is when my partner on a certain project left without notice (AWOL) for several days and I had to do all the work for the both of us. I had to do overtime for several days straight just to catch up with the deadline of the task, not having the time and enough energy to review my own work and outputs I finished. Resulting in a bad output quality and I even got sick after for about 3 days.

Another stressful situation was when I came back to work after I got dengue fever. I was admitted for almost 3 weeks and had to recuperate for another week to get back to my normal body functions. And when I came back, I got swamped with a lot of tasks that the one who replaced haven't finished yet. I had to review everything he did since he was still a newbie in the company.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The most challenging task I did in my past work was Google AdWords strategy planning and maintenance. The first time I got that task was so stressful for me since it involves the company's (client's company) money and profit. I had to do keyword research, make ads for the company's products and services, make sure the landing page is attractive enough for the customers to buy something or avail the services of the company after they click on the ads I made, and lastly make sure that the ads are always on the trend of the country that my client is in and that the company is getting profits out of the ads I made.

As for the most enjoyable task, it's the website design and site speed maintenance. As what I mentioned before, I enjoy creative tasks but I still have many things I need to improve on that aspect. And lastly for the site speed optimization, it's quite satisfying for me seeing that the website I'm assigned to improve the site speed score, get faster and get a green site speed rating.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

The most common thing I usually hear when not only my managers/coworkers describe me is that, I'm quite an introvert since I don't speak much. Some of my coworkers also describe me as someone easy to approach and ask when they have tasks I could help them with, I could give instructions and advice that's easy to understand and follow. They also said I'm a living "Smiley" since they could see me smiling most of the time (haha).

Some of my managers said that I'm someone that's easy to teach because I could easily absorb most if not all what my superiors teach me in regards to the tasks I'm currently having a hard time doing. And also, they said that I'm someone who utilize all my resources first before I ask my managers things I'm not sure about or tasks I am having a hard time doing. As for my shortcomings according to my superiors, well obviously it's that I don't talk much and that I still take much time researching things I'm not sure about even if I have tasks that's close to the deadline, instead of just asking them right away to save time.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment I am most proud of is that I passed the Philippine National IT Standards held in our school which is now called CHMSU when I was still on my fourth-year college. It was an exam determining the skills of an individual specifically on IT, all fourth-year students in my course and more students from different schools and even teachers took the exam. And out of the hundreds of test takers that took the PhilNITS exam there were only four passers, and I am one of the passers.

As for the professional accomplishments it's simply those outputs I did that gave great boost in search engine ranking of the client's website I'm assigned to. And also, those companies that had their profits boosted due to the Google AdWords management I did on the company's google ads. Not only google ads, but also social media ads, Facebook ads, Instagram, and Tiktok.
