

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, I think I am already a lawyer. My dream job when I was a kid was to be a lawyer. I really like the way they dress, talk and present themselves. I have watched movies where the setting was inside a court, and I really admire those attorneys with strong personalities. I am a timid kind of person and I wanted to have the confidence a lawyer possessed. They inspire me to be a better version of myself. A person who is confident to face the crowd. A person who is not afraid to speak his feelings. And a person who will do everything to win his case. I am always excited about the idea of me being in a court representing someone, having an argument with the opponent, winning the case and giving justice to someone I represent. They give me hope that justice will always prevail.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

There was this experience that I will never forget when I was a kinder teacher in one of the private schools in Silay City. I had this student who is diagnosed with an autism spectrum disorder who had tantrums inside the classroom. As a teacher, I am in charge of my students and will be accountable to whatever happens to them under my supervision. Whenever she had her tantrum, she would throw things at her classmates or bite anybody who would touch her. On that day, she had another tantrum and what she did was throw all her classmates' things outside our room. What I did is I also put her things outside and that made her stop. After our class, I immediately informed her parents of what happened. They were ok with what I did to handle their child, but there was this parent who went to our office and complained. I was really shocked because she was not the parent of the student concerned, but she was the one who complained about what I did. I was so stressed at that time because she was insisting that what I did was wrong even if I already talked to the parents of the child. What I did was just to listen to whatever she says, and I was careful of my actions after that. I was still happy because our principal sided with me.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position, the task that I found most challenging was to examine all the records of a person in Florida. So, if a persons' name is common in the US, we would examine hundreds of pages. We should examine their criminal records, mortgages, liens, divorce, bankruptcy and everything related to them. It would really take us a lot of time to finish examining those. We must check every record to make sure if it would affect the property or not. After checking those, we need to verify what code we should use and sometimes it is very hard to determine the type of document we are examining. We should not miss any records because it would be crucial for us to make an error. The task that I enjoyed the most was examining their property, specifically looking on the map offline and online because we were able to check what the property looks like, how big it is and how nice the vicinity is. I really enjoyed it because it motivates me to work hard to have those kinds of property.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

I feel like my previous manager/coworker would describe me as a person who is eager, very open to criticism and responsible. I am eager because I always wanted to do or want something to the point that I will do everything to achieve it. I cannot sit still thinking I was not able to do something for the things that I wanted to finish or achieve. I am open to criticism because I always acknowledge if someone points out something wrong about my works. I may be timid, but I am not a sensitive type of person who will feel bad if someone tells me I did something wrong. I make them my motivation and always try to improve myself. And responsible because I always do the job assigned to me. I always make sure to finish it before the given time. I also give a hand to someone who needs my help. If my manager would assign me a task to take charge of the team, I always make sure that everything is going well, and everyone is performing.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment that I am most proud of was finishing school. I am most proud of that accomplishment because my family was also proud of me. We had a tough life and going to college was very hard. We are not privileged so my family had to really work hard to pay for my tuition, projects and even allowance. I only had one chance, we had an agreement that I should not repeat a year or any subject for me to continuously study. I had a rough college life, I had to line up to the admin office to have my promissory note signed and get an admission to take the exam. I had to go with my mom every weekend for us to do the laundry for her friend just for me to have an allowance for the next week. My younger sibling had to stop for a year after high school because we can't afford two people going to college at the same time. Graduating and having a diploma was the prize for my family's hard work and I really worked hard to achieve it.
