

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job would be a full-time content creator. I have always been struck by the quote, "Find something you love to do, and you'll never work a day in your life." were having a job that you are passionate about and won't feel like you are working. Seeing those content creators online like Kryz Uy, Angel Dei, Mae Layug, and Rei Germar, makes me want to pursue content creation if it was possible. Having a real hold of your time, traveling while working, receiving PRs from brands you love and really use, and collaborating with different celebrities or content creators, is such a dream. I love watching them because I can really see through their eyes that they are passionate about what they do, and they love what they are doing. If it was possible, I would also like to be one of them, where I can also have the privilege of having a work-life balance, and really doing what I am truly passionate about and what my heart desires.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

I have experienced a lot of stressful situations during my college days, but what really had a big impact on me was when we were making our Feasibility Study. It was very stressful since that time classes were done online. It was difficult to reach your groupmates to do our Feasibility, as most of them went back to their respective provinces, our teachers also are not available at any time and the resources and time spent doing class discussions through online set-up are not enough, and the biggest problem is having a stable connection. It was difficult delegating the tasks to my groupmates, since others may have not seen it because there is no stable connection, and I was left doing their part for us to pass on time. I was very stressed since my workload doubled. What I did to overcome it is that I communicated with them earlier, assigning them their part and setting a due date for them to pass on time.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

During my internship days at Commission on Audit – PNP Team, I was given tasks of doing summary reports of collections and deposits of different departments, like DILG, Regional Trial Court, Bureau of Fire Protection, and Land Registration Authority. I found it challenging when I was checking the LRA of Bais City, since most of them lack some of their official receipts, and it is hard to balance the total of collections. Also, they have a hard copy of the summarized collections on the front page of the report, and there were some errors in which the amount does not match the official receipt, I have to check all of the official receipts to the copy of the summary of collections first, and if I see some errors, I have to make a photocopy of those as it serve as proof of their errors. It was challenging since my patience was put to the test and I find the documents of Bais City unorganized. But the thing that I enjoyed the most was every time I encode the data to the computer after checking and verifying the accuracy of the documents and the official receipts.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My coworkers during my internship days were also my classmates, schoolmates, and one of them was from a different school. They would describe me as a shy person. One of my schoolmates told me that she thought I was hard to approach and that I would be hard to be a friend, and that I should have gone and approached their table where they are seated earlier since it was nearing the end of our internship. She would not have thought that I was also funny, talkative, and not shy. Some of them said that I am clean with my things, organized, and I have nice penmanship. They would sometimes go to me and ask if I could write on their DTR so that it would look neat. Our supervisor also at Commission on Audit has seen me going back and forth doing some photocopies of the errors, and he commented that how good of me to spot erroneous errors, even just a decimal place or lack of a centavo from the report.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

What I am personally most proud of is that I graduated on time, and surprisingly with a Latin honor. I would not have thought that I could survive college and finish on time. I was close to giving up and having a break from school when I was in my third year of college, because of the stress and self-doubt I went through. But grace upon grace, I survived, and having a Latin honor is just a bonus for me. Another one is that I passed the Civil Service Exam last August 2022. I did not expect to really pass since I have not reviewed that much, and only reviewed some of the topics 3 days prior to the exam. I was telling myself to just take it again and better luck next time. I just used all my stored knowledge and have been familiar with some of the topics since it was like a high school test, it was just I was challenged in Math since I am not really a fan of it. When the result came out, I was just hoping that my name is posted, and if not, I can just take it again next time, but luckily, my name was on the list of passers.
