

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

- If anything was possible, I would like to have the highest intellectual job in the world, which is being a doctor. Specifically, a Neurosurgeon. For me, being a doctor is such a hugely attainable job that every human can achieve. This requires a lot of factors in order to pursue this kind of profession. Firstly, the money. If I was just born into a very wealthy family, I would never hesitate to enter the medical field. Secondly, high IQ. This profession really requires a standard of intelligence, which is too far for my intelligence quotient to reach. Thirdly, the time to invest. If only I were not just pressured by time and the certain circumstances that led me to have a job immediately, I would invest my time studying and striving to have this degree. Lastly, their job is really crucial since it is dealing with the most important thing, which is the life of the people. Isn't it just amazing how a profession can save lives? It is, and that will always be a dream of mine.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

- The very stressful situation that I experienced way back in my college years was that certain time in my third year. At that time, it was at the peak of the pandemic when we must conduct an online class, which also meant we must deal with all the schoolwork online. I was the leader of two thesis requirements. It was the most challenging situation because that certain semester is also when all the major subjects, which are all heavy loads of accounting subjects are present. It was the highest peak of my stress levels because groupmates seem too hard to reach and I really experience that "it's me against the world" situation. I had a lot on my plate which really led me to my ghosting phases. I never talk to anyone except if it's academically related. I got a series of breakdowns and a lot of realizations also. I overcome all of those by just dealing with it and facing reality as it is. Because when everything seems to be falling apart, this too shall pass.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

- In my previous internship in an accounting firm, the most challenging part for me was the preparation of annual income tax returns. This takes place in a busy season when an accountant will have to deal with a lot of reports such as financial statements and have them audited. There are also a lot of documents to be part of the attachments and have them checked and verified by the clients. There will also be a series of adjustments in the report if the clients are not satisfied with them and during that, there are still pending taxes compliances, and one-time transactions to be considered and submitted. On the other hand, the task that I enjoy the most is auditing. I was assigned to cross-check and cross-reference financial statements and notes to financial statements. I find it very fun to look for mistakes and have them balanced and corrected.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

- My co-interns would always say that I am good at dealing with the task. In addition, they will always notice that I always have a task assigned to me to work on. My supervisor loves to have tasks assigned to me because I am a fast learner, willing to learn and good at dealing with all the tasks assigned, and trustworthy. I will never forget that one time, she entrusted me to process a payment online which is comprised of a hundred thousand in total and had me process a payment over the counter with the sum of a hundred thousand on hand. Also, my supervisor would always tell me that I am learning and absorbing the things that she has taught. I was also productive having a lot of things done in a day. She would always question why I did not even stand up for my seat as I was focused on the task that was given to me.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

- For my personal accomplishments, I would say that I am proudest of being a degree holder today. College years are undeniably hard, and it took a lot of striving and perseverance. From admission itself to a state university, many are called but few are chosen. I am beyond grateful to be one of the hundreds that have been qualified out of a thousand applicants to the accountancy program. Even though plan A did not work out for me, the redirection was still perfect. For my professional accomplishments, I am the most proud of being offered a job right before I graduated. It was really my silent goal, and I am grateful to my supervisor last internship for recognizing my potential as an employee. It is just amazing to realize that my skills and knowledge are being considered when I, myself doubted this a few years ago after my failure to stay in the accountancy program.
