

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job would be a Mathematician. I really love Mathematics even since I was in my elementary years. I have a lot of things that I love, and dealing with Mathematics and numbers is one of them. As I can remember, every time we had Math classes, I didn't get bored even once. I also got high grades in the subject and other Mathematics-related subjects and enjoyed participating in MTAPs Competitions. Well in fact, every time I hear people saying they hate Mathematics, and all I can think of "What's there to hate about Math?", this might be because I grew fond of that field and believe that numbers are always part of our lives.

Furthermore, if anything was possible, I also would love to be either a Certified Public Accountant or Civil Engineer, for they also deal with numbers and are keen on details. Overall, my dream job is where I can be productive, enhance my skills and grow my passion.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

During my college days, I had this stressful situation where our professors gave tasks, assignments, and quizzes in the same period of time. Deadlines and activities collide, and we cannot even complain as it is part of our duties as students. Thus, to overcome this situation, the first thing that I did was list all the activities, assignments, and quizzes with their respective due dates or schedule. After that, I calmed myself and did not overthink things, because I know once I did, I wouldn't know what to do first. Then, I managed my time, avoided distractions such as gadgets, and controlled myself to do things accordingly. I prioritized the urgent activities and finished first the easiest ones as difficult activities take a lot of time. And, during my vacant periods I studied for the quizzes, and together with my group of friends we asked each other a question to answer. I deal with the situation through time management, discipline, support, and by being optimistic.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my internship at Yusay Credit and Finance Corporation, the task that I find most challenging is recording document exceptions. I learned a lot from this task, but it was a challenge for me during my early periods of internship. We need to deal with a lot of documents, as the company has many branches and each of them has different ways of filing documents. Moreover, I need to remember all the exceptions and understand why it is considered to be an audit exception. Yet, despite it being the most challenging task, it is also the task that I enjoy most. I've got to know a lot of different documents and understand the field more. Also, this task enhanced my skills for being attentive to detail and time management. Together with my co-interns, we finished the tasks on time and did a lot of audit exceptions that even our supervisors complimented our work. I got to deal with people and got to be productive.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

Based on the evaluation made by my supervisors, they described me as someone who listens to instructions and is always positive. They commented on how I do things accordingly and sometimes get too indulged in working on the tasks. They would always remind me to take breaks and rest for a while as I can be more productive with enough rest, thus, I always keep this in mind. My co-trainees would describe me as a fun person, and they would thank me for the laughter that we had. They also described me as someone who sees things or even people on the brighter side and is responsible for my duties. I am pleased that they always described me as a positive person, smart, and kind. They would tell me that I tend to do things correctly and am reliable in a lot of things. These descriptions or compliments always inspire me to do better things and be proud of myself.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I am proud that despite our financial difficulties, I was able to finish my studies with a bachelor's degree. This has always been a great milestone for me, as there are a lot of people who don't get to study because of certain circumstances. Not only that, but I was also able to study in a prestigious school that I didn't even imagine in the past. I can feel that a lot of my loved ones are proud of me, and it makes me even prouder. Also, I am proud that I have a clear mind in pursuing my professional life, have certifications, and have passion within me. I am proud that I have now the chance to give my family what they deserve and give them a more stable and comfortable life. Most of all, I am proud that I can contribute to the community and be the first-degree holder in our family.
