

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, I would want to be a scientist who focuses on curing cancer. I believe each and every one of us has a story to tell when we hear the word cancer. I for one have a lot of stories to tell. It first started when I was in high school my grandfather was diagnosed with lung cancer, and it took his life after 3 months. Scared and traumatized after 2 years we were told that my mother who was in Kuwait had gone to surgery after being diagnosed with thyroid cancer. She went home with a scar on her neck knowing she would never be the same again. I want to be a miracle to anyone who is suffering from cancer and be a blessing to their family who are scared for the lives of their loved ones who have cancer. That is why if everything is possible, I want to be that person to heal them from cancer.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

The most stressful situation I had with my past workplace was when I was working on my first Bidding. I was not given proper training in regard to the bidding procedure and how to prepare for it. At the same time, I have to attend to the marketing personnel to prepare their orders and respond to our customers' emails. At that time, I was still new and was still getting a hang on my workloads. What I did was ask for help. I was hesitant at first but knowing that this is a huge deal for our company, I need to ask for help. After my colleague provided me with the basic knowledge of how to prepare for bidding. I made a list where I can check my progress and made a folder which is "done" and "to be done". I completed all the documents needed for that bidding before the deadline. I also made time to familiarize myself with the product names and their uses to be more efficient. I was anxious and stressed doing everything at the same time but being organized and having a workflow really helped me in completing my tasks.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The task I found most challenging in my previous position was preparing for bidding. It was time-consuming that my other workloads needed to be set aside which means backlogs. Bidding is the bread and butter of my previous company, and I was very meticulous in doing it. Everything must be up to date and notarized. One mistake and it can put you on the blacklist, so it was very challenging. On the other hand, the task that I enjoyed the most was encoding sales reports and preparing sales orders. It was a routine and I feel very fulfilled whenever I see that our sales are growing every month. It's also a way for me to check which areas needed to improve and what products need to be promoted more to increase sales. Which hospitals need to be visited and which areas need more engagement? Providing input on how to come up with more sales. Those are the tasks that I enjoy doing.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

Innovated and determined, my manager and coworkers would best describe me with those words. I believe that my manager and coworkers saw me as someone who is resilient enough to bounce back from one challenge to another with the determination that I would produce my best in what I do. Many times, my manager would give me tasks that needed urgency. I always make sure that I finish those tasks with efficiency and on time. Whenever I see that there is something to be improved and I can make my work and my colleagues faster and easier. I make sure to share my ideas with my manager so that I can execute them and implement them for the benefit of everyone. I made sure that I gave my best in what I do and that also goes out to my colleagues. I believe I have contributed that to my previous company, and I believe that is how my manager and colleagues see me.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment I am most proud of is when I completed my parents' SSS contribution. It was always my goal to provide for my parents' needs. Though they weren't able to provide for my college I was determined to pay them back for what they sacrificed for me. I want to ensure their SSS benefit so that they will have something for them to live on once they hit their 60s. I'm proud that I have provided that for them. On the professional aspect, I am still working on it. Right now, I want to build a career and have a stable job. When the time comes, I want to complete my degree and pass the Psychometrician Examination. There is no such thing as being "too late" they say. I am continuously learning through my life experiences, learning and growing from my mistakes. That's what I consider as my professional accomplishment, not so proud but not ashamed.
