

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

I do not necessarily dream of doing a job, but I do have a lifestyle that I wanted to achieve. Living my everyday life without stress or worry about what to eat the next hour or what clothes to wear or what my house would look like is my ideal lifestyle. I always wanted to be sustainable in my life, growing my food in a land where I do not have to worry about protecting it from other people and raising livestock. Also, I do not want to worry about how I spend my day. Having a creative mind, I always wanted to just be free in doing my creative work without the worry of working. On the other hand, if I really had a job that I love, that would be to become a full-time musician. Music is what keeps me going every single day. I usually get out of focus in public when I do not listen to music through my earbuds.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Back in my internship at the Guidance and Evaluation Center of the University of Saint La Salle, I had a co-intern who was getting on our nerves. This intern gets to do nothing the whole day while the rest of us interns worked. Personally, I found it very stressful as this intern finished their internship almost at the same time as us without doing much work. They became the talk of my fellow interns for not being honest with their work time in the office. In the end, we got their friend, who was also an intern, to tell them about it and they later apologized. Although I was stressed about it, I just let them be since whatever they were doing was none of my business. I just thought that I would not be the one who will get a sanction or disciplinary action for doing what they did.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The most challenging task that I experienced in my internship was the time I was an intern at my university's Guidance and Evaluation Center tabulating the scores of the personality test takers. During that time, student workers usually do that task, but I had to cover for one of them because they were sick. Having been given a few instructions, I struggled a little bit doing the task, but I still succeeded in the end. For the task that I enjoyed the most, I was an intern at the university's Human Resource department. Almost every week there was a training lecture for the university's employees. As an intern, I helped my supervisor and co-facilitated the training. I was able to learn a lot about how training was done for employees of a company, especially the training that helps develop themselves holistically. And there was a lot of food during the training, and I also got to enjoy them.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

Based on the evaluation forms that my supervisors rated after my internship, I can say that they were satisfied with my performance as an intern. My supervisor from the HR department of my university described me as flexible, as I able to handle different tasks given to me. The guidance counselor that I was assigned to from the Guidance and Evaluation Center of my university described me as being empathetic, as I was able to co-facilitate group guidance counseling with my counselor. Overall, my supervisors can say that I was a dependable intern to their respective offices. As for my coworkers, I was a good friend to them since most of my fellow interns were my classmates. Also, I was able to enhance my leadership skills since I was appointed as class mayor in my freshman year. My classmates, who were my fellow interns, naturally sought out my help when they needed it.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

Prior to being part of the trial members here in Pathcutters, as a fresh graduate, attaining my diploma is one of my accomplishments that I am proud of. After four years of enduring lectures upon lectures and the pandemic, it felt overwhelmingly good to have finally attained my diploma. Having my diploma is a way to give gratitude to my parents for their hard work just for me to have that good education. Now, I am planning to take my master's degree in the next few years to supplement my accomplishments. Aside from that, I could consider my personal work in music as one of my accomplishments. I get to listen to them every day and they represent me. The music I create is like an extension of my feelings. Whatever I could not express, I let my music speak for me. And that is why I consider my music as one of my dearest accomplishments that I am greatly proud of.
