

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

My dream job is to practice what I studied during university. If anything is possible, I would like to work in a semiconductor manufacturing company or in any manufacturing company. I would like to be assigned to quality assurance. In quality assurance, I like the idea of checking the products to see if they meet the standards or need to be rejected.

I would also like to have a job in a laboratory testing facility, because I do enjoy lab work, specifically failure analysis.

As another dream job, I also wanted to teach little children, like a kindergarten teacher. I just realized recently that I am good with kids, and I think I would be fit to teach in early childhood education.

But with anything being impossible I do dream of a job which could provide me with financial stability so that I could buy what I need and want without thinking of anything else and giving the ones in need of something I took out of my pocket.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I have experienced being in a stressful situation during college. At that time, I was overwhelmed with the number of tasks I needed to finish and do. I had quizzes almost every day and I needed to maintain a passing grade for my major subjects. I was also faced with a personal problem. I think during that time my mental, physical, emotional, spiritual, and intellectual health was really at its lowest because I would go home and just break down.

I overcame it slowly and did it with small steps. I realized that I wasn't happy anymore, so I decided to talk to someone. My family was very supportive of me, and they helped me get through my problems, one by one I did what I could and if I couldn't handle it, I stopped and rested. I would also talk to my friends about the things I feel, and they would give me a bit of advice as well.

But what truly help me is how I trusted God through all the process of healing from this worldly pain, I chose myself at that moment and choosing me before others made me radiate more goodness and made me more stable.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The task that was challenging the most for me was the task that I also enjoyed the most. I had my internship in a plastic manufacturing company, which manufactures different types of pipes.

I was assigned to quality assurance of HDPE Pipes, every duty day there are different pipes being manufactured. So, every duty day I would check on the standard list for comparison by the time we check on the products. There was a system, like 1 roll of pipe would take about 45 mins – 1 hr, so I go to the production floor every 45 mins – 1 hr. When checking smaller diameter pipes, it could be time-consuming and when a product doesn't pass the quality standard it goes to the rejects. I enjoyed writing the details on why the machine needs adjustment so that the product would be in good condition when released or delivered to the client.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My previous supervisor described me as someone who is willing to do her task and is open to feedback. During my internship, there were also times when the HR needed interns to help them with some tasks, so my manager would let us help in the office, she also described me as someone who is ready to take on a job. My coworkers described me as someone that is quiet and smiley, I am open to talking to people and I answer their questions even the ones not related to work. I am not that outgoing, but I have my own definition of fun. When on duty I make sure not to be distracted and finish what I can and need to finish. My manager evaluated me as someone who is on time and when absent due to being sick, I made sure to reschedule my duty day.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment I am most proud of is being really contented and happy with what I have now. I think every day I wake up is an accomplishment for me. I am very thankful for every struggle I faced before because it made me stronger and happier. I think of the future as a blank canvas that continues to be blank until it becomes our present, and my past is a finished painting. I learned to plan things out but when it's not working out, I just let it be and move on to the next.

A professional accomplishment I am most proud of is having this training here in Path. This is my first time applying for a job since I am a fresh graduate and I think even if I am still in the recruitment stage of Path this is still another step higher from where I was before.
