

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

My dream job was to be an architect, though I'm not the most creative person. I liked the idea of designing infrastructures. I'm inspired by the movies and books I've read about secret passages and the interior design as well as how amazing the passages were made leading to a secret room. A room full of treasures, it might be gold or gems that have been hidden for a long time or maybe ancient books of history that would talk about the lost cities or remnants of precious things that might trigger something mechanically or something unexplainable by science. Well aside from the fictional part, I dreamed of creating a unique house design, for myself and for the clients like creating houses that are livable but unique in shape and interior design. I saw the world a little bit maturely at an early age, my father died when I was 2 years old, and growing up, I daydreamed about him being alive and that we were living under the same roof, a house designed by me, and the master bedroom is for him and Mama.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

I've been in a stressful situation before, specifically in college I was a student volunteer for the University Student Government, aside from being stressed academically we have a Feasibility Study and Business Research and other major subjects as well. Being part of an organization was fun and all, but of course, there were moments that were hard and stressful. I was once tasked with the attendance for all courses from First year to Fourth-year students from Monday to Friday. From printing to distribution to different courses and gathering it in the afternoon every day. It was challenging because it was during the U-week and events were being held across campuses, students were everywhere and I'd hear queries here and there, about them being present on other campuses, and were concerned about their attendance. I suggested that we should have them send their selfies or group photos as proof of attendance on their respective group chats as well as send a Gform link that they must answer and attach their photo and it was implemented. Also, it is stressful to see your co-members arguing especially if both are close to you, what I do is if I don't know every detail there is that made them argue, I tell them yes, I will listen to you, but I won't make any bad comments to you or about the other person. I'd rather you guys talk it out when you're calm for most of the time, they would argue about the work that they did for the event, for example, their ideas, one way or another only their suggestions might be accepted or declined depending on the circumstances. If I am aware of the topic and am part of it, I try to explain as calmly as I can as to why their idea was declined.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

I was once assigned as one of the sports secretaries for our campus, it was challenging because I was a participant as well, my task as a secretary was to make and update the participants' profiles, as well as compile and sort their requirements. At first, my mind was everywhere thinking about which one I should do first because I was also answering queries on Messenger. I enjoyed compiling and sorting the documents, updating their profile on MS Word, and then cross-checking the checklist to know what document they were missing, and then making an announcement on their respective group chat about their lacking documents and tagging them. Then I'm off to my own practice, during practice every now and then I receive messages asking what the requirements for a specific game are. Another task was being one of the facilitators for the CHMSU Bingo since we were the ones to look for the cards, we did the canvassing for 7 fun games, including the CHMSU Bingo. It was fun, especially during the fun games, seeing your fellow students enjoy the games we spent time preparing for.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

I think if I were to ask them to describe me, some would say I'm sweet and kind because some of my fellow USG members whenever we see each other we would playfully run towards each other and hug, there were also times when they are in need of personal help, especially the ladies they would specifically look for me like "Diin si nang Jean?" or "Diin si Jean?", strict but approachable, funny but trustworthy, there are times when they would come to me and share their concerns may it be personal problems or about work. I have worked with the liquidation documents of the organization even though I was not part of the finance and budget committee, I was personally asked by them if I could help, since it is a money matter, and I know for a fact that the information on the documents is important in other for the liquidation.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I am most proud of my university accomplishments though I only received two awards. It was more than enough, for I did not join the USG as a volunteer to receive these awards. Seeing these awards does make me feel proud of myself because during my junior year in college, I was too shy to join the USG but fortunately I had the courage when I was in my fourth year, I was proud of my decision, for I was able to meet a lot of people that did not only help me complete the tasks I was assigned to in multiple events, but I got to know them as well, their hobbies, the sports they're into, and the stories they have. I was independent and cooperative during those times, and I learned a lot. We brainstormed many events and spent a lot of time canvassing and buying materials for the stage design and doing the stage design.
