

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible my dream job would be to become a Flight Attendant since I love traveling. At such a young age, I had already made up my mind that I wanted to be a flight attendant. For some reason, I was very inspired by how they looked in their uniforms, how they presented themselves, and how they welcomed their passengers with a smile. Aside from the fact that they have a high salary, they were also given the privilege to travel to places that they want. Although I didn't pursue this dream of mine anymore, I still do dream of traveling around the world. Maybe because I really have this passion to see the beauty and wonders of the world and to understand and learn more about different cultures and languages as well. This dream might be impossible for me to reach right now but I know someday, eventually, it will happen.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Experiencing stressful situations is something that is inevitable to happen in a person's life, especially as you grow. You will be pressured by a lot of things around the world like accomplishments, career, and time. And that's the same thing for me as well and if I must really pinpoint one experience that I had wherein I can say that I was really at the worst moment of my life, it was during the pandemic. I was struggling with how I could continue my education since I lost my scholarship and I really felt like I was a burden to my family. I even decided to stop and not enroll anymore, but my parents encouraged me to just keep going and that they will support me. But that didn't stop there, although I was enrolled, I don't have gadgets that I can use for our online classes so it's really stressing me out because I can't catch up with our lessons. I don't really remember the specific things that I did to overcome these challenges, all I know is that during this time I was really determined to finish school, that's why I have survived, and I am here right now.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

During college, I was really having a hard time catching up with our lessons, especially when it came to doing tasks in software applications since I did not have any gadgets like laptops where I could practice. Although we had a computer laboratory at school, we were only given time to use it during our period. It's quite challenging because I really have to go the extra mile when I'm doing our activity so that I can pass it on the given deadline. This may be the most challenging for me, but these are also the tasks that I enjoy the most because I was able to learn a lot of things about business data analytics and how important our role is in an organization as an accounting information system Analyst. And with that, this made me appreciate more my chosen career and gave me an assurance that I am on the right course.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My teachers and classmates would often describe me as someone full of passion for my work, an artist by heart, and very optimistic. Someone who is kind, generous, and compassionate for those who are in need of some help, a one-call-away friend, and a responsible individual. Some would describe me as a strong and independent woman. Some would also describe me as a person who is cold and a logical thinker sometimes. And although I do get a lot of compliments from them, I don't really believe those because as a person, I know my capacity and limitations. That is why I do get a lot of pressure from the people around me since this is how they see me. I know that I have my flaws and negative sides as well. So, what they actually see is just someone, it is just Grace, trying to become the best version of herself.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

Graduating from the University of St. La Salle is an accomplishment that I am really most proud of. There may have been a lot of setbacks and challenges during my college years, but I was able to overcome them and survive. It is an accomplishment that serves as proof of how I fought and ran the race of life which taught me a lot of things. It taught me resiliency, to be more patient with myself, and to take one step at a time. It taught me things that really matter, and that failure doesn't define who you really are. I may not have graduated with Latin honors which I aimed to have when I was still in high school but it's okay. I know I have done my best and that's enough. Graduating and receiving my diploma from one of the big schools here in Negros Occidental is truly something amazing already.
