

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything is possible, and I am able to choose my dream as my job, it would be to become a Certified Public Accountant. The reason is that numbers always fascinate me, as they trigger me to think or find patterns in things, objects, or places. I also find confidence in things I am comfortable working with, in my case that would be dealing with numbers. It began as a curiosity when I was a kid learning how numbers work, and how the presence of operations influences the results you can get. Later other symbols were introduced, representing different ways of how you can play with numbers. When I was young, I was also into communicating with others, yet as I grew up along with the situations, I encountered I lost that drive, and I am only rediscovering it now. Though dreams do or do not happen small steps create great impacts in the long run, now I just have the mindset that, "what's important is to enjoy what and whom I have today, so that I won't look back with regret in the future."

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

In college I am a member of an organization in our school, there was this one experience where we had an event – this event invited all the clubs/organizations registered, functional, and recognized by the school. Since we are in our senior years along with the subjects we had, we also need to allocate extra time to develop and improve our thesis paper. Since everyone is busy it is agreed that we would be having 2 groups alternating daily to perform responsibility in preparation, setup, as well as the gathering of permits for the event. On the 3rd day, a miscommunication occurred, a meal reserved for students who oversaw a specific task was sponsored. We interpreted the message as we could get the meal if we showed our ID. After an hour or so, one student organizer was very angry calling for our president due to the meal, since she wasn't around, I was tasked to face the other student. The situation was quite chaotic and stiff, and we had to go to the sponsor of the meal to discuss what happened, we concluded that our org would raise a specific amount. That was how that situation was resolved.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

I find it a challenge dealing with other organizations, especially those whose purpose was not aligned with ours, especially in location allocation for events. It is a challenge to find common ground if the representative of another organization doesn't want to listen. I also find it challenging when the event starts, especially when maintaining the booth, members who are assigned to tasks and are not present yet and updating the status of their tasks. What I enjoyed the most though is through those hardships and experiences we develop a connection to the people we interact with as well as trust and often friendship above and beyond the organization. It is always a refreshing experience for me to meet people and be able to see how they see the world, and how they do things, since everyone thinks, acts, and does things differently – by experience, I could learn many things just from interaction and friendship.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My previous coworkers describe me as someone who is not talkative, this is because I am not good at initiating conversation or initiating small talks. I am also someone who minds my own business most of the time not engaging unless invited. They also say that sometimes I "snob" them but most of the time the reason is that I do not see or notice them, I am shy about greeting them, or plainly my mind is wandering somewhere else. They also say that I am someone who responds to notifications promptly may it be in Facebook post or comment, Messenger, text messages or in other applications intended for communication – since as long as the app is in my phone and it notifies, I checked it as soon as I can and respond as fast as I could. They also say I am someone organized since I tend to create a plan especially if it is an event, though I expect the flow not to be follow but at the very least we can prevent dead air in the program.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment that I am most proud of is that I am soon to graduate from the Technological University of the Philippines – Visayas, located in Talisay City. For me it is an accomplishment and a notable one to have my bachelor's degree. It shows not just my dedication and hard work, it also shows my parents' efforts and sacrifices – something they themselves are very happy about. This is in accordance with the fact that I faced many challenges, hurdles, and even roadblocks just to reach this point. I am happy that I have no regret as I looked back and just enjoyed what life has thrown at me, I used it as a stepping stone to help me improve myself and be a light to the people around me. Every experience is a learning experience, as well as every direction is a choice – all we can do is take responsibility to how we find joy in what surrounds us.
