

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

I love to travel, especially to new places. That is why I would want a job that it is possible to have while I am traveling. I would also like a job where I am required to travel to new places, even for a business meeting with a certain client, as long as I am traveling. A job where I can also have a work-life balance, so that I will not be that stressed at work and still have time to unwind and have a peaceful moment. Or even just in the comfort of my home, with my family and not having a hard time commuting to work. I would also like it if my job would let me grow professionally and teach me new things that I could use to improve my skills and apply it to my work.

Basically, my dream job would be something that provides a work-life balance, would let me grow professionally, and where I could also travel.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

There are multiple reasons that would give a stressful situation in the workplace. In my experience, some employees just can't get along or have issues with each other. Especially when the people involved are not talking to each other, they will have a miscommunication and it will affect the people who are working with them. If employees in that department have disputes, it affects the people around them and also their performance at work. This is why we always try to assess the problem, find the cause and think of a solution.

Another stressful situation for me would be when I am required to do a task which I am not familiar with, while also giving me a short deadline. What I do in that situation is that I really ask around the people around me who are more knowledgeable and ask for some advice on how to do that certain task, and then apply it then let them check if I did all of it right.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous work, I was a maintenance technician. I started working in that company as a technician, but I was only doing minor repairs and my knowledge of machine repair is not that good. After a few years, I was assigned to one of our production lines as the only technician who would do the repair and maintenance of the machines. I had a hard time figuring out certain errors and trying to find a solution for it. Thankfully, my previous colleagues were kind enough to help me out and guide me to master the needed process to repair and maintain the machines.

I enjoyed working there with the inventory of parts. Besides the repair and maintenance job, I also do the inventory of machine parts and computer accessories. I always monitor my checklist of machine parts, while also checking if the parts used in the machine are still in good condition.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

I could say that my coworkers describe me as a quiet but easy-to-approach person. I was very close with my coworkers, and it was easy for them to ask me to repair their machines or computers if they encountered an error. This is also why we have good communication, and it makes our job easy and a good workflow. My managers also find it easy to ask me to work on a project, or just for errands in the company. For example, like getting a new machine spare part from the warehouse or just confirming something in the other department.

Most of my coworkers are easy-going and it made my time as an employee there very joyful, and we made a lot of memories. Interacting with different kinds of people with different personalities made it easy for me to interact with new people along the way. I am sure that what I learned will be a great help for me when I am in a new industry.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment that I am most proud of would be when I worked away from home for a long time, which is 8 years. I have always wanted to be independent, and working in the City of Laguna, which is so far away from my hometown, Bacolod City gave me that opportunity. I learned how to survive on my own, budget my salary, and get to know people I am not familiar with. For the long time that I have been there, I have saved a good amount of money to buy my own house and live there for some time. Unfortunately, I had to sell it to have enough money again to go back home to Bacolod City. Despite having only one work experience, I reached the position of Maintenance Technician 4, which is considered a high position in the company. But of course, a high position also requires big responsibilities. But I learned a lot from it, and I am glad that I worked there for a long time.
