

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

- If anything were possible, my dream job would be to become a pilot. Ever since I was a kid, that is what I always answered every time someone would ask me what I would want to be or become when I grew up. Even in kindergarten school, where there was a program where we kids were required to wear a uniform that represented a job that we wanted when we grew up, I remember wearing a Pilot uniform at that time. That is my dream job because, for me, that job is so cool; you get to fly to different parts of the world. Every time I watch a video where I can see the point of view of the pilot while navigating in the sky, I am so amazed by the view, and I always wonder what it feels like to be in the cockpit. Although I have already onboarded the plane so many times, I didn't get the chance to go into the cockpit of the plane.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

- One of the stressful situations I experienced in my past workplace was always working overtime, especially when we were in port. We barely slept 6 hours due to shifting schedules when we were in port. It's hard because we must do some physical jobs even though we don't have enough sleep. We also have to make sure that we are focused on the jobs that we are doing since we're handling millions of dollars worth of cargo, so if we commit just a simple mistake, it would cost a lot of money to the company, and we also need to make sure our safety onboard because, just like cargo, if we neglect just a simple safety measure, it would cost our lives. So, how did I overcome it? I disciplined myself by going to bed right after my shift. I avoid using cellphones, and during rest hours, it's hard to do that, especially if we only have an internet signal when we are in port because during our voyage, we don't have phone signals. Even though it's hard, I still manage to discipline myself since it is very crucial to our line of work.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

- In my previous position as a virtual executive assistant, I had a lot of tasks since I'm like a personal assistant; the only difference is that it was virtual, so my client would assign me any task that I would be able to perform virtually. The only difference between being a personal assistant and a virtual executive assistant is that I wouldn't be able to make coffee for my client. The most challenging task, I think, is that I have a lot of different tasks that I mostly don't know how to perform since, as I mentioned above, she can literally give me any task as long as I can perform it virtually. The task that I enjoy the most is scrolling on her social media platform called WOWUNOW, since it's very easy because I just need to react to a post and add some comments to it, so it's just like scrolling on Facebook.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

- My previous managers and coworkers would describe me as a reliable and disciplined person. I always make sure that I comply with company rules. I make sure that for all the tasks that they give me, I always perform at my best and give the best result that I can. They would describe me as someone they can rely on for some difficult tasks because they know that I will always give my 100 percent on it. Although there will be some instances where I will not be the best person for the job, I will still do the best that I can to deliver a good result. That's why they see me as someone they can rely on because I'm not making excuses just because I'm not good at it; that doesn't mean I will not be able to do it. They would also describe me as a disciplined person because I'm always mindful of time. I always try my best not to be late for work because, for me, that's showing respect for their time as well.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

- One of the personal accomplishments I am most proud of is that I was able to overcome the fear of trying new things, like shifting to a career that I don't have enough knowledge about. I was able to gain new knowledge that is quite far from my college degree. I am proud of it because I think not everyone is willing to do that, especially if you have already started your career. I think it's hard to jump to a new one and start from scratch again. In terms of professional accomplishments, I am proud of how I was able to cope with a new environment or new path for my career. I was able to help myself through self-study and doing my own research, which will help me transition into a new professional career. To be honest, I had a hard time transitioning since I must start from scratch and make my own efforts that will help me gain knowledge about the career that I want to be in, but I can say that I am proud of the result of what I did that I know will help my professional career.
