

1.If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

Every single one of us has a dream. A dream about something that we really want to have, want to be, or want to experience. But if anything was possible, I mean really anything, my dream job is to be a pilot.

To be a pilot is what I have been dreaming of since I was just a child. Whenever I heard the engines roaring in the skies, I would rush outside and look up and wait for the plane to pass by. There are three reasons why I want to be a pilot. One reason is that I want to travel to different countries, visit different cities, eat their food, and experience a lot of things outside my home country. Another reason is that I want to bring my family to travel with me so that they can experience the world too. Plane tickets nowadays aren't cheap, and if I were a pilot, my family could also fly for free. The last reason is that I want to fly planes, not just one plane but all the models of planes.

To be a pilot is really a dream for me. If I was one, I'd go anywhere with my loved ones and enjoy all the perks that come with it.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Stress has become a part of human life. We encounter it almost every day. It comes in different forms, shapes, and comes from various sources. Stress did not spare me either. During my last year in college, doing our capstone project was what I considered the peak of stress in all of my university days.

A month of almost no sleep making our system fully functional and defending our project to our panelists. To overcome the stress from doing all the activities. I did some things to clear my mind out of it. One thing I did was to take periodical breaks. Every two hours of working tirelessly, I take a 30-minute to 1-hour break to do something I like to do. I play mobile games, eat whatever food that I want, or watch a movie that will or might make me happy. Another thing that I did was to hang out with my friends after school and during weekends. One that I did to lessen the stress was to take enough rest. I sleep whenever I feel sleepy or tired from working. If I finish a task early, I go to sleep early too to keep me functional the next day.

Stress can make you miserable. Doing the things you like and taking enough rest are key to lessening the effects of stress on our body and mind.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

Some people say that being a tech support is easy. You just sit around all day, looking at computers and waiting for something to happen. Well, it's not all true. Tech supports do have a lot of responsibilities. I realized that when I was a tech support during my OJT.

The most challenging part of being a support is the inventory of all the damaged computer parts because you must count all of them and make a report to be submitted for auditing. The most enjoyable thing for me is the fixing of the issues during peak hours. A lot of people are having technical issues with their computers. You must manage your time properly to accommodate all the tickets submitted to you. It feels good to fix something and to someone with the issues they are having.

Technical supports play a vital role in an organization. We may not see them all the time, but they are there doing their magic.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

During my OJT at a business process outsourcing here in Bacolod, I met some new people. Those people are my managers and co-workers who I became friends with during my 4-month on-the-job-training. I think my managers would best describe me as a reliable person. Every task that they give me, I do execute and deliver properly. I arrived on time and reported for duty except when I was sick. They were good to me and my co-trainees and co-workers. I even look up to them because I learned a lot from them too. My co-workers or co-trainees, I think they would describe me as a person whom they can share a laugh with and as a person who can be trusted. I didn't feel like I was working there because I enjoyed every second in there doing the tasks with my co-trainees. I never have and never will forget all of them.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment that I am most proud of is that I graduated and finished school on time. I never had the experience of failing a subject and taking it again the next school year or the next semester that the school is going to offer that course. I am proud of that because if I failed a subject, that would only mean that my parents and siblings are going to spend a huge amount again for me to take the course. They are the ones who are funding my schooling. They are the ones who are paying all my expenses from my allowances up to my tuition fees. For that, I am thankful for the things they have done for me. The only thing that I can give back to them is to finish my studies on time without failing any course in the span of four years at my university.
