

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything is possible, my dream job would be a driver. If I had my car, I could travel every day. I love to travel to different places and famous destinations within the provinces or nearby islands. I can manage my own time on when to work and practically, I can earn real-time to support my needs and provide for my family as well. I'm planning to invest in the transport service business in the future. Owning at least 3 cars hopefully in the future for my business that caters to any visitor who loves to go on vacation and promote also the City's Tourism and the Province. Aside from this, I want to have my coffee shop or resto since I am a coffee and food lover too. Offering different flavors. Not only coffee but also smoothies or fruit drinks that help us to be healthy. Continue also our store and make it bigger since it's very helpful for our needs, having a small business aside from our daily jobs.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

The stressful situation I have experienced in the past happened exactly in the workplace. It was way back to my college days, and I am a working student after my mom passed away. It makes me decide to work just to support my needs; food, fare, tuition and other fees required in school. One day, when I went to work, it was a fast-food chain, after I arrived, I was scolded by my manager. She was very angry, cursing me that I didn't do the inventory for yesterday after cleaning my designated area. She was asking for a copy of that inventory, and I said that I hand it over to the manager that was scheduled to work a day before. I was in shock, and I feel cold that I don't know what to say or do because I believe that I really complete the tasks for that day since that is also my first time to work. What I did was just listen to her calmly, then wait for my turn to speak and tell her what exactly happened. I was saved by my other colleague who witnessed that I hand over the Inventory list to the manager who is scheduled to work for that day. She suddenly apologized to me and even gave me a free lunch after what happened.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

When I was working in the BPO Industry before, the most challenging task that I found most was with Sales. I am a technical person and I admit that it's hard for me to sell something. I only get 1 to 5 sales every month compared to my other team members who sell more than me. My supervisor is always asking why only a few and I apologize to him that I'm not good with sales and I don't have any talent regarding that. One reason also that I chose a job that doesn't have any sales experience required. I love working on the technical side. I don't stop finding any resolution applicable to ensure that every specific issue is resolved, regardless of how long it will take. I love doing that because, for me, it is fun to do. It stimulates my brain, to analyze what happened and formulate ideas on how to fix any issue in different ways.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My managers and co-workers always say that I am a helpful and friendly person. Who is always there to help others at work with their tasks. There are times also when my supervisor trusted me for a specific task that is included in his job description and those responsibilities need to be finished within the day. Anything that I can do to help others makes me happy. I am an extrovert person. I can make friends wherever I go. I am an approachable person too, but others think that I'm not, especially when my face looks like I'm in a bad mood. I enjoy camaraderie and having a harmonious relationship as well with my friends. Until now, I have been going out with my friends from high school and college and even with friends in the BPO industry. We go out on a food trip or have a drink and one thing that was never missed is the Karaoke.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishment that I'm most proud of is to have our own house soon. Since I was a kid, I always dreamt of purchasing a lot and building a house that I designed by myself. I learn carpentry with my grandfather. I always helped him build houses before when his friend or neighbor asked him to do so. Right now, that is my goal since I started my own family as well. Not only a house but to have a car also, so we can travel anywhere we want, rain or shine. I don't want it to happen anymore that we rode with a motorcycle, 3 of us with my daughter who is 2 years old that it happened. Suddenly, it was raining, and we couldn't find any nearest shelter. All of us got wet, especially my baby and that triggered me to decide to purchase a car in the future. I am positive that the time will come when we can reach our goals or dreams and they will become a reality. Manifesting into these things and I'm sure that God will provide this once you work hard for it.
