

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

My dream job would be to become a content creator and event organizer. I want to entertain people and enrich their lives through the things I love. I want to share my love for games, books, psychology, and many more. As a content creator, I could stream the latest games and share my thoughts, make a YouTube video that makes people contemplate, and create a community that supports one another.

As an event organizer, I could create many events that people can enjoy. They could go to prove their skills in tournaments, showcase local talent, and make a safe space for people to share their passions.

All throughout my life I have been ruled by passion. It is a fire that keeps me going and fuels me in the darkest parts of my life. I want to share my passion with everyone and share the light to keep them going on.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

I have been in many stressful situations throughout my career. As a Guidance Associate, I oversaw close to a thousand students. These students include those with special needs. Some of these students have problematic behaviors and some do not. I must adjust with the Guidance office, the faculty, parents, and outside specialists. What made Guidance Associate more difficult was my relative inexperience in the field and my problems with my ex-girlfriend. She had an undiagnosed mental problem which made my innate depression worse. As such, my relationship and work stress just made my mental health worse. I overcame it by seeking professional help and my family. Medicine helped a lot, but nothing beats time and kindness. It took a lot of time and extreme patience, but I can confidently say that I am better now through the help of my loved ones and being kind to myself.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position as an event organizer, the most challenging task was marketing the event. There had been a few weeks till the event happened but there are still a few publishing materials posted. This affected all the events since there is little information for the convention goers. There had been a few participants for the competitions that I had to make publishing materials, go to talented competitors, and spread the word.

The task that I enjoyed the most was executing the event itself. My mentor once told me that events are 95% planning and 5% execution. Every part of the execution went smoothly as we had prepared for everything. We checked with the competitors, made back-ups of files, and brought every material to the event. All we had to do was oversee the event so that it went smoothly. There were a few hiccups but it's nothing that we couldn't solve. I enjoyed every moment of the event despite the fatigue, stress, and chaos.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

My previous coworkers and managers would describe me as someone passionate, hardworking, and friendly. They would tell me that I am passionate because they see me give my 100% in every event that we do. I tend to rant on and on about something that I enjoy, especially when given the space. I would cheer on the contestants to the point of losing my voice and congratulate them on their well-deserved win. They would tell me that I am hardworking as they see me move back and forth on the production floor. If there are no hosts or directors, I would step up to do both at the same time. After that, I would go back to the floor to run errands for the production. I work hard to make sure that every aspect of the show goes smoothly. I coordinated with people, made backups of files, created the background for the stage, and many more. If all else fails, I can improvise on the spot. Lastly, they would say I am friendly as I tend to talk to people and listen to them. If it were the first time meeting a colleague, I would strike up a conversation to get to know them. I like spending time with other people especially when it's face-to-face. I go to conventions, tournaments, events, and gatherings to be with the people I like the most.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The professional accomplishment I am most proud of was being the Program Supervisor for the biggest hobby convention in Negros Occidental. Pop-X had occupied two SMX Halls and two meeting rooms. I had a lot to cover for the event. I oversaw both the main stage and the meet-and-greet events. Thus, I had to juggle these responsibilities at the same time. Aside from the stage, I also had to do other tasks. I took on the challenge of advertising the event to gain traction. I made Google Drives and Group Chats for the contestants. I wrote all the contest rules and regulations. I directed the stage when the director had done some tasks. I became a runner for errands. I did all of this while there was convention chaos with everything that was going on. Despite all the pain, frustration, and exhaustion, I was able to pull it off with the best team in Bacolod City. I learned a lot during that experience, and I will never forget what I accomplished and what I learned during the event.
