

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

My dream job is to become a Certified Public Accountant-Lawyer. I was raised in a family that often discussed our aspirations, and this dream holds special significance as it is not just my personal preference but a shared aspiration within my family. Nevertheless, life presented unforeseen challenges, leading to a redirection of my path by a higher power. Despite these unexpected twists, I have maintained resilience and optimism in all my pursuits, firmly believing that delayed dreams should not be equated with denied dreams. Moreover, I love engaging in business, which in the first place I have no regrets in pursuing a career that is still business-related. Interestingly, my current job is somehow interconnected with the essence of this goal. As of now, I love where I am, and I am willing to learn more and grow together with talented and proactive team of Pathcutters.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

In my previous workplace, I experienced stress. However, I am the type of person who always looks at the bigger picture when life gets tough. I worked as an Internal Auditor, a role that required focus on my job. One needs to be meticulous in financial data, check the business financial data, and evaluate the accounting method to ensure it conforms to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP). Working in microfinance motivated me to always do my best while remaining grounded because I believe that possessing knowledge is futile without a strong work ethic. Respect, patience, and kindness are my go-to supplements whenever I find myself in a stressful situation. While stress is inevitable in the workplace, we can still choose to fight and give our best effort. Personally, my stress coping mechanisms include listening to worship songs, talking to friends, playing mobile legends, and maintaining intensive mental fortitude.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position, the task I found most challenging was checking the hundreds of financial records, which included clients' financial statements and information, and verifying withdrawal and deposit receipts. It required patience and focus to ensure that all computations were correct. With intensive focus, I could finish it within two days, as we were only given limited time to evaluate and verify everything before proceeding to the next audit engagement. If we found incorrect details in the transactions, we included them in our reports, which were eventually discussed with the operations team via Google Meet. On the other hand, the task I enjoyed the most was conducting financial analysis, where the operations budget was discussed, and we talked about financial income, losses, and bad debts regarding their performance during the period. I was required to investigate these amounts to understand how they contributed to the results.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

After completing our audit engagement, we engage in what we call "Audit Feedbacking," where I sit down with my Audit supervisor and Senior Auditor. During this session, they provide evaluations of my performance. According to their assessment, they perceive me as an outgoing individual. As always, I welcome constructive criticism regarding my work, as I am committed to professional growth. It's important for me to ensure that I implement all suggested areas for improvement in my actions. Beyond that, I maintain positive relationships with both my managers and coworkers. The audit team exhibits remarkable discipline and hard work, particularly considering the limited time we have for our engagements. Despite the pressure, the team is considerate and driven. What's particularly commendable is that amidst the challenges, we've managed to foster kindness and cooperation among each other. In conclusion, I found great satisfaction in working with my previous managers and coworkers, as it provided invaluable lessons that I will carry forward in my next job.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

One of my most significant professional accomplishments that I take pride in is the completion of my college degree. This achievement required years of dedicated hard work and unwavering consistency throughout the entire process. Despite encountering various twists and turns along the way, I remained resilient, and the journey taught me life lessons, particularly emphasizing the importance of perseverance and not giving up on one's dreams. The academic pursuit not only contributed to my professional growth but also played a crucial role in my personal development. In terms of character development, the experience honed my ability to effectively socialize with other people. Engaging in the academic environment and collaborating with peers gave me the opportunity to enhance my interpersonal skills, fostering effective communication and building positive relationships. In essence, the completion of my college degree represents a multifaceted accomplishment, influencing not only my professional trajectory but also contributing significantly to my personal growth and interpersonal capabilities. The lessons learned and skills acquired during this journey continue to resonate in both my professional and personal life, serving as a foundation for future endeavors.
