

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

My dream job would be to become a singer if anything was possible. I know it sounds so ambitious since I do not have the most beautiful voice and I do not know how to read music notes. However, in a world where anything was possible, I would like to be a singer. I know how hard this job is since it does not guarantee that I will eventually become famous and earn a lot of money, also the reason why I did not pursue this job. But I believe that singing is one thing I am passionate about. I think if one is passionate about his or her job, it would not be exhausting. Although, inevitably, it would get tiring along the way, you will still find a reason why you should not quit that job. In addition to that, I want to become a singer to become friends with the artists I love. I admire them for how they write their songs and I guess it would be a wonderful experience to get to talk to them personally and know their thoughts. Those are the reasons why I want to be a singer if anything is possible.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

As a fresh graduate and since this is my first job, the stressful situation that I experienced happened when I was an officer of an organization during college, specifically, a Treasurer. It was not easy for me since I had to make sure our organization had the right amount of budget for an event and not overspending since in the first place, it is not our own money. One time when we were preparing for an event, although we did not spend more than our budget, we believed that we spent so much more than we computed. Before things got worse, I made sure to talk to the members who were tasked to buy the supplies to try to find cheaper alternatives since we already spent too much on the venue itself. I guess I can say that I was able to overcome that stressful situation since we solved the problem before it got worse. Because of that situation, I realized how important communication is, most especially when dealing with a task that involves talking to other people.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

Since I am a fresh graduate, I will relate it to my internship. During my internship which was conducted online, I found the task of presenting our findings the most challenging. I am not comfortable in public speaking, the reason why presentations like those that we did during internship were challenging for me. However, I was able to overcome it day by day after I got comfortable with my co-interns and trainers. On the other hand, the task that I enjoyed the most was cross-checking. We were given a file to check with another master file to verify if the data presented was accurate. I do not know the exact reason why I enjoy doing that, but it helped me have an overview of what auditing in practice was like since at that time, I only knew auditing in theory. I also enjoyed encoding data and making sure everything was accurate. In conclusion, my internship helped me improve my skills in public speaking and made me realize what job I enjoy.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

I have not encountered any managers and coworkers yet since this is my first job. However, my teachers and classmates would describe me as "small but terrible". I do not agree with that since I know my capabilities still need to improve. I think I often get the compliment that I am smart from people because ever since I was a child, I was an achiever. My high school classmates would be amazed at how fast I solve problems and do my tasks. However, I believe my skills and abilities were not as good in college as they were in my elementary and high school days. I know I work fast but sometimes my work is not that accurate so now I make sure to review everything before I submit my work. College taught me that since in our quizzes and exams, we were not allowed to have erasures. I think the idea of me being smart also changed when I was in college, but I am continuously working on myself to be better.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

Since I have not officially entered the corporate world yet, I think for now the personal accomplishment that I am proud of is that I am an Accountancy graduate. I know it was not all because of my abilities since I also prayed so hard to be able to graduate with that course. Many would perceive Accountancy as a difficult course, and I can attest to that. I have shed a lot of tears, gone through sleepless nights, and had moments where I doubt if I can pass the program. It is a great achievement that I passed Accountancy since I also graduated as a scholar. It was a difficult journey, but it was worth it. Through my course, I have enhanced my skills and am prepared for the corporate world. I believe that everything I have learned can be useful and helpful as I go through my journey in this training period and by the time, I officially work.
