

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

- If everything is in my favor, the dream job that I will pursue is Graphic Designing. Designing and being creative are the things that make my life much more delightful. Being able to appreciate arts and designs brings a lot of wonder and joy to someone like me. I am not actually just impressed with the product of designing, but also by the design procedure. Designing can be very challenging for some individuals, yet even though I find it also as tough as others, the difference is I find it enjoyable. I love designing to the point that I just find my failures being positive, and it can help me to develop my skills and knowledge. Ever since I realized how I love arts and designs, my perspective on life has also become far more positive and lovely. Life itself is chaotic, yet maybe I can make someone's day less stressful through my designs and can also make them appreciate that life has more to offer. Arts and designs are everywhere, we just need to notice.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

- Stress and pressure are often inevitable whether it's in the workplace or at school. In my college days, I experienced numerous stressful situations. The scenario that comes first to my mind is when Covid started. We were forced to be in an online setup type of education. As someone who was taking a Bachelor of Science in Information Technology, it was very challenging to learn how to program and code online. It was quite hard even in a face-to-face setup, how much more with an online setup. I firmly believe that those moments were very stressful, not just for me, but also for all of us who were working and studying at that time. Yet, even with that situation, I was still able to find positivity through it. I took that chance to explore more about the internet and to maximize its usage in my daily life and future. Being optimistic shaped me to become someone who can face and overcome any stressful situation.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

- After I finished my studies for Visual Graphics design, I was able to have my OJT in a company that specializes in advertising, such as poster making and sticker installations. My job there was not mainly focused on designing but rather on all the available tasks. Considering that, I first find it challenging to execute such a task that I'm unfamiliar with. But in due course of time, I was able to execute them properly and with just a little supervision. I am glad that I was able to gain new knowledge aside from applying and developing my designing skills in that company. I particularly enjoy suggesting ideas to my clients and improving their branding. Through that, I became capable of building rapport and trust from them. I firmly believe that there's always be challenges in every aspect or position that I will be in the future. Yet, I know that being open to every challenge will highly impact my improvements and learnings onwards.

4. How would your previous managers/coworkers describe you?

- In my previous position, my manager would probably describe me as a person who is quick and good, particularly at designing. She just didn't absorb me since I have fellow trainees who are much older than me. She said that there are still plenty of opportunities for me because I am still young. My coworkers would also find me comfortable to be with. I was kind of shy when I first came to work, but suddenly became comfortable by time. I had fun with them and oftentimes have a joke around to break dull moments. I'm proud of myself that maybe I somehow brought joy to my previous coworkers. I acknowledged their impressions on me and proceeded to find more opportunities. Thus, I am in this amazing and lovely company. I believe that this company would offer me the opportunity that I've been aiming for. Having both passion and compassion at work is very helpful in building positive attachment with everyone in that workplace.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

- The personal accomplishment that I'm very proud of is the realization of how much I love the arts and designs around me. In addition, I am always proud to have an optimistic mindset. Being positive always helps me overcome challenges and to continue moving forward in life. I always believe that being happy and positive will alter your perspective in life in a good way. Acknowledging failures is also something that I'm proud of. Failures made me who I am today. There are plenty of failures waiting for me, yet I'm very optimistic on my approach to it. As to my professional accomplishments, I am still working on them. I am looking forward to achieving something professionally that I can always be proud of. It's great that I am in this company to start building those goals and achievements.
