

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, I would like to be a historian or an anthropologist. I have this great interest when it comes to learning about the history of how things were invented and discovered. We were taught that we should always look back on our past and recognize the progress that our ancestors have made and the idea that our history shaped and molded our present generation. Also, I like to learn how people during ancient times lived their lives and I want to learn how they came up with such progress and innovation. Moreover, I love the idea of learning about different cultures and their contributions to modern society. How humans evolved from living in caves and utilizing rocks as their primary means of subsistence to the amazing discoveries of concrete homes and structures, as well as intelligent appliances and other devices that have made our lives comfortable and easier.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, there were numerous times where I found myself in a stressful situation when I was in college. There were times that I needed financial assistance from my parents, but they could not provide or help me. Also, there were days where I found myself lost and did not have the energy to go to the campus or attend online classes. It was hard to think that you were struggling and suffering from these stressful situations. However, I always taught myself to keep your spirits up and know that this is not the end. I overcame these stressful situations with the help of an online personality, Nicki Minaj. I never thought that someone who does not even know about my existence would serve as my inspiration to continue living and chase my dreams. She taught me how to believe in myself when there was nobody rooting for me. Nonetheless, she inspired me to work hard and to always appreciate my individuality as a person.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

During my on-the-job training, we were called apprentices. We were taught different things regarding the history of the company and the nature of our work. Basically, we were assigned to organize the company documents and files. We arranged them according to the year these files were made and completed. Also, they taught us how to encode invoices and receipts and prepare disbursement vouchers and financial statements. Moreover, the company also taught us how to file income taxes for our clients in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The most challenging task that I ever had while I was still an apprentice was to prepare and recompute a specific financial statement. It was difficult for me because I had to go through and review the other financial statements back and forth to identify and look for a certain amount that I should deduct or add for the computation. The task that I enjoyed the most was the tax filing. I had to travel to different banks to file these income taxes. I found it enjoyable because I had the chance to walk and spend time outside the office.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

My supervisor always taught me to treat our clients with respect and to always prioritize professionalism during working hours. When it comes to my work ethic, my supervisor does not have any problem with it since I am working diligently when it comes to my daily tasks and my responsibilities. I have this strong work ethic where I need to follow the company guidelines and always strive for quality output. One reason why I try to possess this strong and positive work ethic is because we are graded according to our performance, which will also affect our grades academically. Also, my supervisor taught me that having a strong work ethic will result in better results and output. She advised me to maintain my strong work ethic because this will be beneficial to me and the company that I will be working with, where I will eventually be able to use it in my actual career.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

Being able to graduate with Latin honors is one of the accomplishments that I am proud of. But the achievement I am most proud of is that I won first place in an electronic bookkeeping divisional school competition way back in my 12th grade. I always have doubts that I will never win in a contest with more than 15 participating schools. I never expected to win that competition because I knew in my mind that I was no better than anyone. I am proud of myself that I was able to participate in and win such a competition. That was when I realized that I had something in me and that I had something to give. It was a call for me to never underestimate someone's potential and to never judge a book by its cover. You will never know what they have in them until they realize their full potential. It was like a "hard work paid off" moment for me after sleepless nights of reviewing and studying.
