

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything is possible, my dream job is to be a veterinary doctor. I really do love animals; I have cats and a dog at home. I wanted to study more about them, learn scientific explanations for why certain things happen to animals. Learn the cure for animal diseases and help them in every situation possible. When I was young, I had a puppy, who became sick and died. I figured out that it was due to parvo, and I don't have knowledge on that. Animals are a friend to humankind; they make us feel happy and become a great companion for us. My cats, know everything what's happening when I'm in my room, all those tears I shed and frustrations that sometimes I throw at them. Animals are the most loving and loyal beings in this world, that's why they deserve to be treated well. They deserve our love.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

During my college years, I was a working scholar at our school. In the periodicals section where I was assigned, there's a new librarian. I had to teach her things that she already learned in her past job. It came to a point where it's making me stressed because she's not absorbing things at all. She had to pass reports to our director, and it would turn out that there were many errors, so I had to do the job. It was an unprofessional approach for me, so to sort things out and for my peace of mind, I talked to her. Knowing that she's my head in that section, I must respect her and consult with her before it gets even worse. When it comes to this situation, I always keep in mind that there should be respect for one another and to always communicate things to resolve it.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In that time, the most challenging task for me would be dealing with noisy students. I'm torn between dealing with them as a student assistant and abide by the rules in the library or dealing with them as my fellow student. It's hard when you have some familiar faces and friends who you need to deal with, because during that time I considered a lot what the reactions of others and mostly who are noisy are my seniors. And I don't want to disturb others also by repeatedly tapping the bell. But I have a task also that I enjoy doing the most, It's the task that involves typing or using the computer. I enjoy listing all journals that are for disposal, creating a requisition form for purchasing journals, making reports and doing expenditures. Because through this I can apply what I have learned in my program and appreciate it.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

When I'm doing my job, especially when it is a request from the director itself, I always do it with full effort to provide good results. So, I can say that I am reliable enough based on the results of my work, and through the appreciation of the director itself. It would show that I'm capable of doing things when most of the tasks are given to me, tasks that are very important. Our librarian would also give high ratings when it comes to how efficiently I do the task assigned to me. I am a very good in nature kind of person, so sometimes my juniors would confide to me things they are struggling with and concerns regarding the task. When it comes to school presentation, my group mates would give me good rating for doing the assigned task accurately and how responsive I am to the possible changes.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I'm very proud of myself for surviving college life for almost 5 years. For surviving my working scholar journey and doubts in life if I can make it or not. I'm proud that I established myself as what I am today through those challenges in life that I learned so many things that I can share with others also. With those little wins in my life, especially for finishing and surviving my internship and review journey, I am very proud of it. I'm very proud also to survive our thesis and awarded as best paper, presentation and output in our section. There are many things I'm very proud of, even those that would not matter, but I know I survived with. Life may be hard, but I always continue to appreciate the beauty in it, continue to be hopeful, be optimistic and work hard for my dreams and my family.
