

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, I would love to be a doctor. Being a doctor is my dream job because I feel like it would give me an opportunity to help others. The satisfaction of being of help to others outweighs the compensation you can get from this profession. Being a doctor is a noble job for me, given the amount of time, effort, and expenses you put into studying it. It would mean compromising time for family, friends, and loved ones. If given the chance, I would choose to be a pediatrician. This would mean doing two of the things I love: helping others and taking care of kids. No matter how small or big the compensation may be, I would be happy doing this job. It is very fulfilling for me to alleviate the pain and suffering that children are experiencing. This will also make me an instrument to inspire them to be strong and fight for whatever sickness they are going through.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I have experienced stressful situations at my past workplace. I can cite a few, but maybe the most stressful situation I have been through is attending to my father in the hospital during the busy season. In the accounting industry, the busy season is considered the most hectic time of the financial year. It is when we audit financial statements for clients to file their Income Tax Return. This time requires a lot of time and focus because clients are bombarding us with tasks. During the 2023 busy season, my father suffered from a heart attack, and I was the one who took the responsibility of attending to him while He is in the ICU. It took a toll on me because I am very pressured with the workload and at the same time the anxiety I was feeling given my father's situation. I had to multitask and do overtime at the hospital to avoid backlogs. I am just thankful to my teammates for being a great support to me that time, it helped me a lot to survive.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position as an experienced audit associate, the most challenging task was making working papers. Working papers are our documentation of the audit process. As someone new to these tasks, I had a bit of difficulty doing it since I cannot ask directly to my senior because we are working from home. We had to vouch documents virtually and wait for client response for us to proceed with the working paper. There are also deadlines we need to meet which adds to the complexity of the tasks. Maneuvering unfamiliar tools and soft wares also eats up my time. We are also low in manpower because we had to work on 10 engagements, and we were only 3 in the team. However, those tasks helped me improve my time management skill. I learned how to prioritize tasks and communicate with my team members. Even though I consider it the most challenging, I also learned a lot from those tasks

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

After working with my manager and colleagues for one year, maybe they have known by now that I am always chill with work. During my time working in my past company, I really tried my best to have a work life balance. As much as possible, I do not do overtime because I know how important it is for me to spend time with my family and loved ones. I try my best to finish my tasks in a timely manner for me to have personal time for myself after. I initiate conversations and throw jokes to lighten up my colleagues' moods. I always ask questions whenever I am having difficulty with some tasks. Moreover, I am also open with feedback given to me by my manager and senior. I believe I have formed a good rapport with my colleagues, and I really had a great time working with them too.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

My personal accomplishment I am most proud of is being my family's bread winner for a year. It has been my dream to give back to my parents not out of obligation but out of love. They were there for me in every phase of my life and it was fulfilling on my part to have the capacity to give them not just what they need but also what they want. They have been my inspiration and strength to continue working and living in this very fast paced world. I am just grateful that I got the chance to help them while they are still strong and well. No matter where I am, they are my impetus to always have my best foot forward. I wanted to reciprocate the sense of security they have always given me. I want to be there for them as much as they are there for me.
