

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job would be getting paid while travelling. It is my dream to be able to travel around the globe, and experience different cultures of every country. I think that we have got to live only once in a lifetime, and I want to make the most out of it by learning and doing things that I would enjoy. It is also fulfilling if I am getting paid for doing something I always enjoy doing. Travelling is usually extremely expensive, especially if you're going to travel internationally, being able to travel around the globe without minding the expenses since I am getting paid for it will make it more exciting and enjoyable. Aside from that, I can also bring my family to have fun with the same things that I am enjoying. Travelling alone is nice, but travelling with your family is a completely different feeling, and it's like experiencing my dream job altogether.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I have experienced a stressful situation in my past workplace. I worked at a call center company and our job was to guide delivery drivers around the neighborhood; every day we must take volumes of calls and keep up with the company's metric. We are always taught to empathize with the customers, especially if they are frustrated with our process. I have this one call wherein a driver was extremely annoyed since they already delivered the package, but he didn't get paid by the app that we used. It is understandable for them to feel frustrated since they did their job right, but he didn't get paid. The driver keeps on threatening about taking it in legal terms and I will be held accountable since according to him, I'm conspiring with the company. After the call, what I did is I took a break, went to the bathroom and tried to calm myself since I was shaking, I remembered a breathing exercise that I once saw on the social media and that's what I did. This is what I usually do if I'm stressed, take a little break and breathe to calm my mind.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous internship, the task I found the most challenging was reconciling the official receipts that we released against the system in one week. It is extremely difficult since we must manually check our records and reconcile it with the system, and what makes it more difficult is that we have a time constraint. There are only two interns including myself, so we really tried our best to finish but since some of the processes are still unfamiliar, we were not able to finish the task in one week, it took at least two weeks to reconcile a portion of the task. The task that I enjoy the most during my previous internship was talking to people, so we are assigned to like a reception desk wherein we have to release raffle tickets and shirts to the members of the cooperative, it is exhausting but we get to enjoy it since the members are nice to talk to, and it is rare for us to encounter rude members.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

My past colleagues and managers describe my work ethics as nice, approachable and respectful. They said that I am extroverted, and I am always smiling while greeting them. I interact with the members the most so, they find me approachable based on what they said on the evaluation form that we made them fill out after the internship. My supervisor said that I usually listen to what she instructed although my work is not always accurate, she said that it is acceptable since it is my first time doing it, and what's important is that I take it as an opportunity to learn. I find a sense of accomplishment when I see her feedback since I always thought that she is aloof and that she is not satisfied with our work. This is where I learned that she is grateful for having us there since we really helped her a lot with the tasks, especially the ones that have a time limit.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

My personal accomplishment that I am most proud of is that I was able to take my family out for a vacation with my personal money, without them spending anything. One of my bucket lists is to treat my family out for dinner or lunch without them spending anything, but I was able to not just treat them out to eat but also go on a vacation trip with them. It is the first time that I did that, and it was extremely fulfilling being able to bond with them. I never thought that before I graduated, I would be able to treat them with something I worked hard for, they are surprised and proud at the same time. We enjoyed the whole trip, I made sure to not let them spend anything on something even with the food or souvenirs, I told them that it was my treat for them. I hope that someday I will be able to do it again but this time, out of town.
