

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, I would continue my profession as my dream job, and it is to be a Licensed Civil Engineer. I will not waste the time and effort, tears, failures, success, everything that I had been through, and most especially the financial and emotional support of my parents during my college days. Although that course is not my first choice, I did learn to love it and enjoy the job as a Civil Engineer. I had an experience going to different sites and inspected the works of the construction workers on a certain building or house during my OJT days, and to be honest, I enjoyed it. Another reason why I chose that job as my dream job is because of my sister. She is an Architecture graduate and knowing the construction industry, Civil Engineers and Architects are working hand-on-hand to finish the project. I want to work together with my sister, share thoughts about the construction industry, and finish the project successfully.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I did. However, it is not on the work itself, but it is within the workplace, and it is the way the management and the owner of that company handle financial aspects. Delayed salary is the cause of my stressful situation at that company. Salaries were delayed not just a day but a couple of weeks and there are times that it will reach up to a month. As an employee, it is very stressful, especially since we have due dates and bills that we need to pay monthly. We kept on reminding and asking them every payday as to when we get our salary, but no response at all, or they have lot of reasons. Therefore, I decided to resign from that company and apply to other companies that I am sure reputable and know how to handle employee's salaries properly. I managed to free myself from that toxic environment and move on for a fresh start.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

The task that I find most challenging in my previous position is the outbound cold calling for appointment setting. I need to call several people, introduce to them the services that my client offers, explain as to what we can do for them and why they need our services. Offer discovery call so they can talk directly to my client. There are times that some of them are irate and will cuss at you for calling them. But I am not taking it personally as after the call, it is also the end of your conversation to them. And the task that I enjoy most is the lead generation. It makes me look like I'm a stalker because my job is to gather information of people from different social media platforms or from different websites. I need to look for their names, phone number, email address, home address, business website, social media accounts and whatever information that is related to them.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

With regard to attendance, I think they would describe it as never been late for work. Because I always make sure that I arrive at work earlier than my log in schedule. I don't do absences, but if ever I do, I make sure that the reason is valid, and I am able to finish my work so there will be no pending tasks on the day that I will be back to work. They would also describe me as reliable and productive. Every shift, I always make sure to reach my quota for the day or higher so that the client would trust me more in doing the tasks that they assigned to me. Reliable because I am also managing the social media accounts of the client, they trusted me their accounts passwords, in return, I would not keep their personal information private and secure because I don't want waste the respect that they had given me.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The accomplishment that I am proud of is being able to finish my education despite the circumstances I had in the past. I did stop because of some personal reasons. I applied for a job and luckily, I was able to find one despite being an undergraduate. That was my first job, and it is in a BPO industry, after a couple of months I resigned and chose to work at home from an outsourcing company from Manila. After a year working in that company, I was able to save money and decided to continue my education. I transferred to another school, took up the same course. Thankfully, I did not fail my subjects, and I managed to finish what I had started and graduated. After graduating, I decided to take a board exam review at Cebu, but unfortunately, I was not able to take the board exam because there is a problem with my birth certificate. But still, I am proud that I have finished my education and graduated.
