

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything were possible, my dream job would be to become an accountant or the owner of my own business. I have always wanted a stable and rewarding career, and passing the CPA board exam would be a significant step toward achieving that goal. Becoming an accountant would allow me to use my skills in finance and problem-solving while providing financial security for my future. On the other hand, owning a business appeal to me because it offers independence and the chance to create something meaningful. Ultimately, I want to make my family proud and give back to them for all the sacrifices and things they made during my school years. Their support has been invaluable, and I hope to repay their kindness by providing a comfortable and fulfilling life for them. Pursuing this dream is not just about personal success but also about honoring my family's hard work and dedication.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, during my college years, I experienced a stressful situation, especially during exam weeks when I also had to worry about paying for my tuition. At that time, I had many priorities to balance. I needed to do live streaming every weekend to support myself because I was living far from home and staying in a boarding house. Being independent was challenging, especially since my family didn't have enough money to fully support me. This financial pressure added to my stress. To overcome this, I focused on thinking positively and managing my time wisely. I created a schedule that allowed me to study effectively while still dedicating time to live streaming to earn money. This balance helped me stay on track with my academics and also support my parents financially. Through patience, time management, and a positive mindset, I was able to handle stress and continue working toward my goals. I'm also grateful that I overcame those situations.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

During my internship, the most challenging task I encountered was validating vouchers and reconciling items. This responsibility required a high level of accuracy and attention to detail because I had to carefully check and verify the data to ensure everything was correct. Any mistakes could cause discrepancies, so it was important to be thorough and precise. Despite the challenge, this task helped me develop my analytical skills and improved my ability to work carefully under pressure.

On the other hand, I enjoyed encoding data in QuickBooks and performing various administrative tasks the most. These activities allowed me to gain hands-on experience with accounting software and understand the daily operations of a business. I found these tasks satisfying because they gave me a sense of accomplishment and helped me build practical skills that will be useful in my future career. Overall, my internship was a valuable learning experience that balanced challenges with enjoyable tasks.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

During my internship or on-the-job training, my past trainers and co-trainees would describe me as a hardworking and dedicated person. They saw me as someone who was always on time, often arriving early to prepare for the day. I was also flexible and willing to do different kinds of tasks, which they really appreciated. They knew they could rely on me because I was always ready to help and eager to learn new things. Even when I faced challenges, I stayed positive and cheerful. I tried to keep a good attitude because I believe it helps not just me, but also the people around me. My trainers noticed that I didn't give up easily and that I always gave my best in every task. They would describe my work ethic as responsible, committed, and always looking for ways to improve. Their kind words and support continue to inspire me to work harder and become better at everything I do.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I am most proud of being the breadwinner of my family and of earning my college degree. Graduating was a major personal and academic accomplishment for me, especially considering the challenges I faced throughout my education. I worked hard both inside and outside the classroom, and I'm proud of what I achieved, whether academically or in extracurricular activities. Being the breadwinner is something I hold close to my heart. I'm grateful that God blessed me with the talent of singing, which I used to support my younger siblings by performing on various live-streaming platforms. After graduation, I was able to help my sister and brothers with their tuition fees and allowances, which brought me a great sense of fulfillment. Providing for my family while pursuing my studies was never easy, but it made me stronger, more responsible, and more determined to succeed. These accomplishments remind me of how far I've come and inspire me to keep striving for more.
