

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything is possible, my dream job would be to work as a procurement officer or manager in an Electric Cooperative. A procurement officer is a person who purchases, finds sources, and manages goods and services to the customers, especially on materials with regards to Electrical components, services, supply chain strategies, analyzing bids, financial management, and negotiating with other people. I chose this dream job because as a procurement officer, I can practice and enhance my skills and background both in Electrical Technology and Accountancy. The right profession should have both an Electrical and Accounting background to ensure that projects have the necessary electrical equipment, on time and within the given budget, and it directly impacts the profitability of the company. So, if I am given the chance in the future, I will surely continue my accountancy degree for a better opportunity and higher position to achieve and to have a Chief Procurement Officer or Vice President of Strategic Sourcing title and have long-term relationship with the company that will allow me to grow professionally.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if a fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, when I was still at school last semester, we had 5 long quizzes about accounting and law for that day starting from 1PM to 8PM. I studied the whole night and prepared myself for a very long day the next day. I practiced solving a lot of word problems, need to memorize articles, and read a lot of readings on International Accounting Standards since we will have an essay quiz regarding standards on real-time bases. I was very overwhelmed that night thinking if I could surpass the next day, but I did my best to overcome stress and self-questioning. On the next day, I did great with auditing quizzes and standards quizzes. It may be hard, but with studying, remembering the rules, and understanding or assessing the given problem, the outcome was great. During my law class, our professor was very intimidating but as she mentions every question, a sudden flow of information kept rushing in my brain and surpassed the law quiz and recitation well. Preparation is important to survive anything you need to.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my life in the university, the task I find the most challenging is keeping my study habit intact. I need to study and lend a lot of time in reading books, answering a lot of word problems, searching possible changes and understanding each standard and how to gauge each account, avoiding social media to lock in, and sometimes I need to be absent on family gatherings and social events due to studying to survive my course. In contrast, the task I enjoyed the most was the result of my hard work. I really love knowing how my output went, how I did my work, and what things I need to improve. I love hearing feedback because I know it will be the best for me. I also enjoy the acknowledgements of my professors because it boosts my self-confidence. It challenges me to do more and encourages me to do better and best in everything that I do.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

During my internship, my supervisors and team leaders describe me as optimistic, flexible and hardworking by first, I enjoy spreading positivity in everywhere I go, I am very hopeful in different tasks that was given to me. I am always believing in a favorable result even when I am faced with challenging circumstances in the workplace or in life. I am viewing setbacks as temporary, and it will change if I do my best in every way. Next, I am flexible by allowing information or tasks that were given to me to absorb and digest, and I enjoy learning new things because I know that it will enhance my skills and capabilities. I can adapt to changes and I am very teachable. Lastly, I'm hardworking by doing my best in the duties or tasks given to me. I put a lot of effort, care, and energy into my work. I do not want any disappointments; I want my supervisors and team leaders to feel that they can rely on me anytime. I am very dedicated to leading the people around me to success.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

The personal accomplishments I am most proud of is when the company where I did my internship offered me regularization. I felt like my efforts were highly appreciated and acknowledged. When I was about to end my contract with them, they offered it to me but due to prior plans, I politely refused the offer and proceeded taking my second course, which is accountancy. During my university years, one of my accomplishments that I am also proud of was being a dean's lister. Despite having zero background in accountancy, since I graduated on the Engineering side, I managed to keep up with my classmates with their given backgrounds. But it includes a lot of effort and time management to come up with them. I felt like my efforts were worth it. Especially when qualifying exams took place, it was an extensive kind of exam because it covers all topics that were discussed the whole semester, and I placed 19th with over 300 students who took the exams and I am beyond grateful for the success and progress from day 1.
