

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

- Growing up, we were taught by our parents to have a clear picture of what our future would look like. Throughout the years this picture has kept changing due to multiple experiences we've encountered. A lot of constraints could hinder one's dreams such as financial, moral, and physical support. Upon growing up, I was expected to follow the path they have set for me, and that is to be an Engineer. I was so hard-headed that I chose a different career and ended up being a teacher. Now, all I wanted is a job that could introduce me to a different culture and the closest one I could think of is being a Flight Attendant.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

- Having a job is both an honor and privilege, given the economy we're now on. I can't imagine the number of application letters I produced just to land a better paying job. I am left with no choice but to enter an industry they once tagged as 'Trap'. Working here traps you to an idea that there is no other industry that could pay you more than they could. There were no days without stress as you are facing displeased customers voicing their concern of the service you are not even aware of. This industry is not for fragile soul as it will break you from within.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

- I am a fan of this specific app. I spend most of my time interacting with people there. What great about this platform is that it lets you do side hustles from people who's looking for freelancers. I landed on a task that lets me work with a diverse group of people from different parts of the world. The challenging part is that you must open your mind for different experiences, interactions, and generally how their minds work. Imagine switching your personality constantly as these people have different personalities, points of view, and humor. What made this job enjoyable is the opportunity to interact with these people, it forces yourself to think outside the box, and it gives me a different perspective in life.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

- I always have a good relationship with my past colleagues, we still communicate even up to this day. I may look or sound unapproachable but trust me I am way more kind and friendly than you think. What my previous managers or colleagues like about me is the way I work, how hardworking I am and how good I am in everything that I do, they even tagged me as 'Jack of all trade'. I always make sure I abide by the rules and am always for the betterment of the company. For me, if the company is treating you right, they deserve the best of you.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

- I worked my way here from the bottom, it's not that great yet but I am going there. I am proud to say that I have 2 major credentials. I will not stop here, and I will work my way to the top. I remember doubting myself before but that didn't stop me from achieving what I always wanted.
