

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream job would be in the Culinary Industry, as a Chef. I grew up in an environment wherein my parents and relatives are passionate about cooking and baking. I used to assist my grandmother every time she bakes cakes for an event or family gathering. I am passionate about cooking, if given the chance I would love to study culinary. But anyone can cook, it doesn't mean that you haven't studied culinary, you're not a good cook. There are a lot of great food in the world that was mad not by a Chef, sometimes even a teen can come up with great recipes.

Well it is a dream job after all since it's out of my reach for now, but soon if opportunities arise, I will surely grab the chance to be a Chef someday. Up until now, I'm still passionate about cooking and baking but for now, I'll just keep that dream job on my dreams list.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

At my past workplace I have encountered a lot of stressful situations, but one thing that I will never forget was the time when I was in my graveyard shift. There was a time when a guest had accidentally broken the bidet of the toilet. It was the first for me and I'm not a plumber, but the water just kept on gushing. I must do something to fix the problem. There were only two of us on duty that night me and the front desk associate. I just stayed calm and what I did was try to adjust the valve so that the water would stop but it didn't work. The water kept on gushing for around 15 minutes or more then luckily, I remembered one of the senior employees was around the area, he has knowledge on how to fix the problem. I asked for his help then he instructed me to get the extra bidet from the storage and replace the broken one.

Well it was somehow a stressful situation since a lot of things could happen, the water level on the tank might drop and will cause some issues for the other rooms. But the first thing that you must always do is to stay calm and relax that everything will be under control.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

One most challenging task in my previous role was operating the generator if power interruption occurs. We might be the bellhop/dining server, but we were also tasked to operate the generator. It is crucial since even if you are doing something and there is a power interruption you need to drop everything and rush going to the generator to turn it on. Also, there are safety measures to follow, must off the breaker of the main source and all the other breakers first before turning on the generator. Then it must be logged to the sheet all the amperes, oil, etc.

I enjoyed serving guests, seeing them happy with their food, or being satisfied with your service made me feel that I did great. In the hospitality industry, guest satisfaction is the top priority and that was always my goal every time I entered the hotel.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

My past colleagues would usually say that I am a fast learner and that they like my personality. As to my work ethic, they would describe that I can be flexible about whatever tasks or situations there are. Also, I am attentive to my surroundings that if anyone needs help, I will go and lend a hand.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

I haven't accomplished that much yet in life, but to choose one, I am most proud of having a bachelor's degree. Not everyone is privileged to study. I have some down times during my college years, but I did not give up, I was able to graduate and got my degree. I spent my college years enjoyment but in my last year our research group was chosen to represent our department to compete with other departments to find out who got the best research study. We may not have gotten the top but still to participate with the colloquium is an achievement already.
