

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

If anything was possible, my dream is to be a lawyer. We live in a world where injustice is relevant and tolerated because some people are hungry for power and some have a great sense of entitlement. These kinds of people are the ones who create imbalance within the scale of the justice system. Which is why, if there are endless possibilities in this world to become who we want to be, I would really like to be a lawyer to serve as a voice for those people who do not have the power to be heard. Furthermore, being a lawyer could be a platform where I could help others by not just providing legal services, but by also helping the community through making advocacies that would help lessen the amount of injustice that some people encounter daily.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Yes, I have experienced a stressful situation in college. College is not an easy route to achieving your dreams. There are a lot of challenges to face, especially in finishing your thesis. As we all know, one of the most crucial requirements in passing college is the compliance of your thesis. For me, it is the most stressful part to endure all throughout my college life because there are a lot of instances that could go wrong which could ruin the timeline of your process. A stressful situation that occurred when I was doing my thesis is that one of our thesis participants cancelled on our interview request due to personal reasons. By that time, we really need to complete interviewing our participants because the deadline for the data gathering is due next week. It is a moment of pressure, but panicking never helps.

What I did to overcome the pressure and the panic was, I tried to stay calm as possible, took a lot of breathing exercises, and thought of ways to find an answer to the problem. Eventually, after endless inquiries with my colleagues and friends, there was a participant who agreed on the interview even though it was a last-minute request.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

My previous position was an intern at a law office. One of the tasks that I find challenging was organizing and managing legal documents. Legal documents are very crucial to handle because, first and foremost, they are known to be confidential because the information provided in those papers is that of the lawyer's clients. It is important that you don't mix up the files while handling them because the document might end up with the wrong client.

The task I enjoyed the most was assisting the office secretary, such as answering phone calls and assisting the clients in the office. I enjoyed these tasks the most because I get to communicate with people and provide the necessary help they need. Also, it is an enjoyable obligation to get to learn as to what were the daily happenings in a law office.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

After our internships, we received a copy of a feedback form from our employer. Our employer said that it was a pleasure that I chose their office as part of my internship training. He left remarks saying that I have a flexible nature of working style. He also welcomed us job opportunities in their office in the near future.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

Some personal or professional accomplishments that I am most proud of are graduating on time despite being an irregular student during my college days and being able to pass the first year of law school.
