

1. If anything was possible, what would your dream job be, and why?

Growing up, I would stare at the skies, and admire the clouds, the moon, and the stars at night. I remember being fascinated by my uncle's telescope the first time I held my hands on it. Since then, I have dreamed of going to space and exploring the vast universe. I also used to have fun during yearly science fairs in high school which included knowing about the unique characteristics of different planets in the solar system. Furthermore, one memorable event was when I participated in our science camp where we held experiments, talks, and games. Seeing the moon with my own eyes from the large telescope has ignited my interest in space. I used to regularly visit the NASA website and read updates on the placements of planets and the important events that would take place. During the Mars Rover launch, I successfully submitted my name on their online ticket portal. So, if anything was possible, my dream job would be an astronaut.

2. Have you ever experienced a stressful situation in your past workplace (college if fresh graduate), what was it and how did you overcome it?

Experiencing a stressful situation in a workplace is inevitable and for one, I can recall being stressed with juggling multiple tasks of finishing encoding the SKUs on the system, finalizing the inventory data, and submitting on time the weekly report to the head office via email. I panicked for a while then I realized that I must compose myself and focus back on the tasks sorted by the respective deadline that I listed on my notes. Furthermore, I reminded myself that I cannot control the entire situation. The more I stress out, the more that I might commit some errors and would compromise the whole report. I started to work on the task with the nearest deadline, which is finalizing the inventory data with the logistics supervisor and warehouse personnel. This is to ensure that my submission of the weekly report will be accurate. At the end of the day, I was able to overcome this situation and learned that prioritizing tasks with a sense of urgency and accuracy is vital in improving the efficiency of my workload.

3. In your previous position, what task did you find most challenging and why? What task did you enjoy most and why?

In my previous position, there are tasks that can put you in a difficult position on what to do but the task that I find the most challenging is dealing with the monthly closing of inventory or the recon on the financial statement. This is where everything gets complicated as there would be instances that the driver or the salesmen would record the SKU or the amount of their delivery on the withdrawal and return slips incorrectly. Therefore, the record on other analysts and on my end would also be inaccurate. On the other hand, the task that I enjoyed the most in my previous position is when I encode the SKUs in the system from the Delivery Receipts. Since everything is already stated on paper and I have familiarized myself with the codes, I can easily input the information, and my work will be done in an efficient manner.

4. How would your past colleagues or managers describe your work ethic?

My past colleagues or managers would describe my work ethic as organized and detail oriented. I have always valued the work or tasks that are expected from me and therefore I try my best to deliver it in a way that everything will be on time, are placed accordingly, and with accuracy. When it comes to learning the ins and outs of what I am supposed to fulfill, I diligently learn and take note of every reminder and feedback. I am reserved in the workplace, but when it comes to working with others, I am a team player and can communicate on important matters and clarifications.

5. What personal or professional accomplishments are you most proud of?

There are several accomplishments that I am most proud of when it comes to my personal and professional life. In my personal aspect, I was able to hike a raw trail in Silay City. At first, I thought that I do not have enough strength but as they say, "mind over matter". I was able to go down the trail and back. Another accomplishment is when I secured a scholarship during my college years. I tried my best during the entrance exams and passed the interview as well. In my professional aspect, the accomplishment I am most proud of is my ability to adapt to the high-pressure environment of my previous workplace. As someone who didn't have work experience at that time, familiarizing myself with the tasks were daunting at first but then as I continue to learn it with determination, I was able to be on pace with my workmates who have been at the company for a long time.
